

Where President Will Dedicate Eternal Light

Rising on the summit of Oak Hill, Gettysburg battlefield, is the Eternal light peace memorial shown in this recent photograph. At the left is the stand from which President Roosevelt will speak when he dedicates the light Sunday evening, July 3.

His Dedication of Memorial Will Feature Celebration on Famous Battlefield, as Thousands Gather to Witness Reunion

Watched by a million eyes, an eternal light will flame through the disk over the battlefield at Gettysburg on Sunday evening, July 3, at the touch of President Roosevelt's hand.

In dedicating the peace light memorial President Roosevelt will bring a climax to the week-long program honoring Civil War veterans attending the 75th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg and the final reunion of Blue and Grey.

From a town with a normal population of 6,000, Gettysburg will be transformed overnight into a center holding as many people as a metropolis. More than a million persons, conservative travel experts estimate, will attend the ceremonies and events, which began on Wednesday of this week and will continue uninterruptedly through Wednesday of next week.

PROGRAM OF CELEBRATION
The first two days of the program, and the last two, will be devoted to reunions and gatherings of the old soldiers, while principal public events will be held from July 1 to 4 inclusive.

Friday July 1 has been designated as "Reunion Day," with governors of many states to join with descendants of prominent Northern and Southern leaders in a colorful program.

On Saturday, July 2, Veterans' and Governors' Day, veterans of all wars since 1865 will participate in a brilliant parade and review.

President's Day, Sunday, July 3, will open with an open-air service of tribute and commemoration during the morning. President Roosevelt will deliver an address and dedicate the eternal peace light at 5:30 o'clock eastern standard time.

Thrilling maneuvers by the U. S. Army Air Corps will close the evening.

Monday, July 4, will be U. S. Army day, with military demonstrations by the regular Army scheduled for both morning and afternoon. A spectacular two-hour fireworks display will end the day's program.

ETERNAL MEMORIAL LIGHT
During appropriate ceremonies on the afternoon of July 3, the President will light an eternal flame rising three feet above a bronze urn surmounting the monument. At night the light will be visible from a distance twenty miles away.

Mr. Roosevelt's address will be an outstanding feature of the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Battle of Gettysburg June 29 to July 6 inclusive.

The memorial stands northwest of Gettysburg in the beautiful wooded Oak Ridge area of the battlefield and faces the southeast. One standing on the elevated platform which is the base of the shaft views an extensive panorama of the scene of the crucial three-day battle of the Civil War, including Big Round Top to the south. Travelers see the non-memorial, as they approach Gettysburg on the Lincoln Highway, Harrisburg, Carlisle and Mummansburg roads.

The shaft is approximately forty feet in its overall height above the platform which is about seven feet above the approach to the memorial. The platform is rectangular in shape 42x85 feet in dimension. The memorial is of veined Alabama limestone and the pavements of Crab Orchard Stone.

On the principal face of the shaft near the base is a sculptured bas-relief by the American sculptor, Lee Lawrie. In bas-relief, eight feet high are two standing figures in embrace, holding a branch of laurel and a wreath, with an eagle symbolic of the nation. On two sides of the shaft at level with the bas-relief are the inscriptions:

"With Firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right."
"An Enduring Light to Guide us in Unity and Fellowship."
The platform will be reached by steps at either side from the lower terrace which is paved in Crab Orchard stone flanked by wide stretches of grass. The face of the platform bears the principal inscription: "Eternal Peace in a Nation United"—the theme of the Memorial.

WELL LAID OUT CAMP
Less than 4000 of the veterans will return this year to the field where more than 150,000 former comrades struggled—but they will share the historic shrine that day with a half-million men, women, and children representing every state in the Union.

Laid out along systematic community lines by the U. S. Army this modern camp has designated streets, its own electric and water supply, and adequate sanitary facilities—in fact every provision for the comfort and safety of the old soldiers.

Here are some facts and figures: Seven miles of boardwalk; 10 miles of water lines; 20 miles electric lines; 900,000 feet of lumber used in construction; 3800 tents; 21,000 blankets; 7000 cots; 50,000 yards mosquito netting.

charge of the first aid station and a physician is on call in case of serious illness.

This camp is operated on a non-profit basis and is open to the general public. Groups of ten or more under the supervision of a group leader will be accepted. Groups of either men or women or both can be accommodated. The camp staff deals directly with the group leader—not with individual members of the group.

The camp plant consists of five barracks; a commodious dining hall, a recreation hall and ample space for outdoor sports. Excellent swimming and boating facilities are available. Electric lights, hot and cold showers and all amusements of pure drinking water make the camp modern in every respect.

Church, service and other clubs, labor groups, conferences or institutes may find the camp the answer to their group training problems. Groups may conduct their own programs with the assistance of a trained staff of recreation leaders, or they may turn to the camp staff to organize and carry out their entire program.

By special arrangement and at no extra cost, specialists in general adult education, workers education, parent education and in community organization will be available for consultation. Soft ball, volleyball, games, nature lore, hand crafts and all other recreation activities will be available under supervision of the camp staff.

A charge of $4.50 per week per person covers the expense of food. There are no other charges. The camp provides shelter, steel cots and clean mattresses. Food of the highest quality, prepared by expert chefs is guaranteed. All the facilities of a well organized, well built and professionally staffed camp are offered.

Campers are required to supply their own mattress cover and other bedding to suit themselves. Nights are often cold, even in midsummer, at the camp. Dishes, knives and flashlights must be furnished by the campers. Camp lights are out at 10:30 p. m. No fireworks, firearms or intoxicating beverages are permitted at the camp. Officers receive the right to exclude from the camp any person whose conduct jeopardizes the general welfare of the camp as a whole.

Applications for the use of the Kettle Creek Recreation Camp may be secured by writing to Donald C. Cochran, Area Supervisor of Education and Recreation Division, W. P. A., Milliron Building, DuBois, Pa.

Lingle Family In First Reunion

The first reunion of the Lingle families was held on Saturday, June 25 at Hairy John's Park. About eighty members of the family were present. A very delightful meal was spread on the table at noon, after which election of officers was held. Those chosen were: J. P. Ripka, president; Miles Lingle, vice president; Helen Grenoble, secretary, and C. W. Lingle, treasurer. It was decided to hold the reunion next year at the same place, on the fourth Saturday in July. Music was furnished by the Penn's Valley Harmonizers. Let the average man attend a convention, about a hundred miles from home, and he will surprise you. Over the past five years, July's list of dead from accidental causes has been 29 per cent greater than that of the average year.
