

New Gregg School Plans Progressing

District Advised That Preliminary Drawings Have Been Submitted to Harrisburg

Officials of the Gregg Township School District were notified on Thursday of last week that the preliminary drawings for the proposed new school building at Spring Mills, were on that date submitted to the school officials at Harrisburg, by Hunter - Caldwell, registered architects of Altoona, who were employed by the district to prepare plans for the proposed new building unit. The architects informed the district that all necessary forms and plans have been submitted in order to make application for the building under the Thompson Plan.

The Department previously approved Gregg Township as a complete attendance area, centralized at Spring Mills, where it is proposed to erect a new building in order to accommodate all the pupils in the township—both elementary and secondary. An elementary and junior-senior high school program would be set up in the new plan. The details of the proposed building must be worked out in conjunction with the School Building Bureau at Harrisburg, and it is expected that the preliminary drawings now submitted, will form the basis for final approval on the building. Final approval was secured several weeks ago in connection with the Financial and Curriculum Problems of the district.

The proposed building would be constructed under the terms of the Thompson Plan, whereby the local district would pay twenty-two percent of the total cost of the building and equipment, with the State and Federal Government paying the remaining 78%.

It is expected that approximately 1000 new school buildings will be constructed throughout the state as a result of the passage of the Thompson Act.

Library Group To Hold Meeting

The public meeting will be held in conjunction with the regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Directors. All persons interested in the library project here are cordially invited to attend.

The opening of the library is being temporarily delayed through lack of funds because of the fact that the County Commissioners, who did not include an appropriation for the library in their budget for 1938, report that they will be unable to appropriate any money until the beginning of the new year. When the County allocation is made the State will appropriate 75 per cent of that amount as the Commonwealth's contribution. With these funds, expected to total $1,750 annually, available, the Corporation can proceed to employ a full time librarian and to formally open the library.

In the meantime the board is not marking time. The heating plant has been virtually rebuilt in order to provide for the more economical heating of the large Humes building. Toilet facilities have been re-arranged, and much of the interior has been repaired and repapered. By the time the building is thrown open to the public it will be in excellent condition.

Money is not only the source of much evil, but it is also the cause of most worry.

THE LATE CHARLES M. MCCURDY

Prominent Banker Dies at Home

preserved for future generations. The paper won considerable recognition in the financial world and remains as a monument to his ability in his chosen profession.

Charles M. McCurdy was a son of Robert and Mary Marshall McCurdy and was born at Gettysburg on November 9, 1852, making his age at time of death 85 years, 10 months and 18 days. He received his early education in the Gettysburg schools and attended Gettysburg College until the death of his father when he quit school and went to the then sparsely settled state of Wisconsin.

After some years in that state he returned to his home town where he entered the employ of the Gettysburg National Bank. On January 11, 1898 he was elected cashier of the First National Bank, Bellefonte, and upon coming here to accept the position made his home for a time at the Bush Hotel.

When, in 1906, other members of his family joined him in Bellefonte, they occupied the home on East Curtin street now owned by J. D. Hunter. Subsequently they moved to the home on East Linn street now occupied by D. M. Kline, and about 1920 they purchased from A. G. Morris the present McCurdy residence on East Linn street.

Mr. McCurdy's advancement at the First National Bank was rapid, and when the bank's president, Col. James P. Coburn passed away late in 1908, Mr. McCurdy was elected to fill the vacancy. His election became effective January 12, 1909, and since that time the bank has been conducted under his supervision.

During the World War Mr. McCurdy performed most valuable service to his country as chairman of the War Loans committee of Centre county. Working with W. Harrison Walker, who was chairman of the county War Savings committee, his untiring efforts to put Centre county "over the top" in helping to finance the war brought exceptional results. In addition, he served as chairman of the local Red Cross during the conflict.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church and a former elder of the Gettysburg Presbyterian church. An ardent hunter and angler in his younger days, Mr. McCurdy retained until the last a deep interest in outdoor activities, although in recent years his health did not permit his actual participation in his favorite hobbies.

Mr. McCurdy was never married, and is survived by two sisters: Mrs. Joseph Blinn Scott, of North Allegheny street, Bellefonte, and Miss Grace McCurdy, at home. Another sister, Miss Virginia McCurdy, of Bellefonte, passed away in June, 1927. Other survivors include a niece, Mrs. George Dentithorne, of State College, and a nephew, Charles McCurdy Scott, of Bellefonte, who is also affiliated with the First National Bank.

Funeral services were held at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the home, in charge of the Rev. William C. Thompson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, Bellefonte. The funeral cortege will leave this Thursday morning for Gettysburg, where interment will be made in the Evergreen cemetery. A short service at the cemetery will precede interment.
