REAL LOVE

'Tis the little things in life that count. The things we do each day, And love, real love my dear Will always show the way. If you really love somebody Don't just tell them so. But by deeds and actions Your love to them then show. Real love is like a lamp With chimney shining bright Seeding forth white beams Not a feeble light.

The wick meant for courage And should be free from black, Combined with faith and wisdom Of which we sometimes lack. With the chimney bright and shining And the wick trimmed just right Then filled with the oil of common sense, Your lamp of love should throw a "bright light."
