

Sunday School Lesson

THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE

International Sunday School Lesson for November 13, 1938.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Thou shalt not kill."—Exodus 20:13. "Whoever hateth his brother is a murderer."—1 John 3:15.

(Lesson Text: Exodus 20:13; Matt. 5:21-26, 38-42.)

The Sixth Commandment is short and simple. "Thou shalt not kill." Many believe that there are exceptions, justifying military service and other necessary activities of modern citizens, but these do not appear in the text, and are even more positively denied by the admonition of Christ to love our enemies.

Pick up practically any newspaper today and you will see that this commandment is wantonly disobeyed in the United States. Even right in our midst there are instances of disobedience to this command against the taking of human life by another. In 1934, there were approximately 12,000 homicides recorded in the United States, or approximately 9.5 deaths by physical violence to every 100,000 of our population.

The distressing fact is that this rate is increasing yearly and apparently nothing effective is being done to remedy the situation. Instead of being adequately punished by the courts, it often happens that guilty persons are either acquitted altogether or are given sentences that are out of proportion to the seriousness of the crimes committed.

Modern fiction and moving pictures, in which crime is so minutely depicted and oftentimes attractively portrayed, are lending their aid to the present trend toward cheapening the value of human life. It seems that there are many people in our country who think nothing of hiring men to murder their enemies or to murder themselves, if by so doing they can get them out of the way. It's getting to be common to read of racketeers taking their rivals or even their henchmen who "know too much" for a "ride" from which they never return. But, in thinking of this type of murder, let us not overlook the fact that the man or woman who drives an automobile while he or she is under the influence of whiskey, is a potential murderer and is as guilty of the murder of his or her victims as if he or she wantonly struck them down in cold blood. Disrespect for human life is also to be seen in the criminal negligence in many industrial practices, and unsanitary and dangerous working conditions. Those responsible who knowingly permit unsafe conditions to exist and do nothing to remedy them are guilty of violating this commandment.

Human life was also held cheap by the world into which Jesus came. The condition of the slaves of women and children, were almost unmentionable. With the coming of Jesus and His teachings, things began to be different. The good news which Jesus brought into the world gave to all men the sense of a new dignity and a new worth, for Jesus taught the Fatherhood of God and, consequently, the universal brotherhood of man.

Jesus, in His teachings, showed that, in order to keep man from killing his brother man, the feelings which engender strife must be removed from his heart. Therefore, instead of hatred, malice, jealousy, revenge, unforgiveness and like feelings, which sooner or later break out into violence, men should be taught to fill their hearts with love so that there would be no room for such sinful feelings.

If Christians generally, in all their dealings with their fellowmen, would practice the teaching of the Golden Rule, as given by Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also unto them," not only would their individual lives be happier but their community would also be a better place in which to live.

'38 Healthiest Year.

According to the Public Health Service, 1938 appears to be one of the healthiest years in American history, with an increase in the country's birthrate and a decrease in its death rate.

honest living. Prospecting is the one last remaining method of making a living that is open to all; that is depression and jail proof.

All the equipment that one needs for the simplest outfit, leaving out the camping items, a gold pan, pick, shovel, and hammer, nails, axe, saw, a piece of quarter inch mesh, a few long one-inch boards, and a piece of corduroy or burlap socking, to be used in building a sluice-box.

Having located a likely looking sand bar or sand and gravel bank that has formed on the inside curve of a stream, the prospector loads his gold pan with shovels full of sand and gravel and takes it down to the creek. He fills it with water and starts a shaking, rocking movement to settle all the fine stuff to the bottom of the pan. The gravel is hand picked, washed in the pan and thrown out, the remaining sand and mud being kept in motion. Every now and then he lets some of it spill over the edge of the pan and nothing is left but a handful of black sand called Magnetite and the gold dust. He then lets a little water carry the sand around the bottom groove of the pan. The gold is heavier than the sand and will hang back when the pan is given a slight swirl. Any flecks of gold seen are called "color."

A bank showing about twenty "color" in it for every pan full of sand and gravel worked down, justifies the building of a sluice-box. Gold is classed as Flour, Fine, Medium, Flake or coarse Gold, and anything larger are nuggets. Flour Gold is just that, and can barely be seen in the bottom of a pan. Fine Gold is about the size of the cross-section of a pin. Coarse gold and flake gold are about the size of a pin head, and nuggets are the size of a match head and up. The average placer gold is from fine to flake, the flour gold being usually lost over the "riffles" in the box.

There are many varieties of sluice boxes and cradles and rockers, but we can only describe the simplest and most generally used type. The average sluice box is a trough a foot wide, eight inches deep and around ten to fifteen feet long. There is just enough slope to carry away the dirt placed in it. Not enough slope will fall to wash clean, and too great a slope will carry over the finer gold to be lost in the "tailings" which is the sand and gravel that runs up the outside of the sluice box. The slope may be checked by taking a sample pan of the "tailings" to determine how much gold is being lost. A twenty color pan before being washed down the box should only show three or four colors in the "tailings" pile.

The dirt is placed in the sluice box at its head end on a screen which is shaken to remove the larger gravel while the water is poured over it either by dipping water from a long pole, called a "Long Tom" or by having the water run into the head of the sluice box from a ditch carrying water from further up the creek. The water washes the dirt and gravel down the box over a series of wooden cross pieces about half an inch square on the bottom of the box. Under these "riffles," as they are called, is the quarter mesh screen wire used to hold down the corduroy or burlap socking on the bottom. This sock catches the gold dust as the wooden cross pieces eddy the water and settle the dust. These "riffles" fill with sand about three times a day and have to be taken out and the box washed down into a tub or gold pan. The apron is scrubbed like a dirty pair of socks in the same tub, the water then being poured off and the residue panned for the gold that is in it.

The present market price of gold is $35.00 an ounce and it is easy to sell. Most small town storekeepers in gold country have gold scales and will trade supplies "even up" for the dust. Most of the banks in such districts also have scales and buy any amount for cash, subject to a small discount. The U. S. Mint will accept any amount over a hundred dollars if they are given the place and date where the gold was found.

COUPLES HONORED ON WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES A number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bartley along the Jacksonville road, Sunday, to extend felicitations to the couple upon their 38th wedding anniversary which occurred Monday, and also to congratulate their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arden Walters, who celebrated their 10th anniversary. The occasion also marked the eighth birthday of the Bartley's granddaughter, Mary Bartley.

Survivors of CCC Fire Tell Story

burned in the forest fire was given by a foreman as the crew left camp to fight the blaze.

East Getz, superintendent of Camp Cameron, told a coroner's jury investigating the deaths that Howard P. May, of Erie, Pa., one of the victims, was a coroner's jury member and had not received prior training. He added, however, that "quite a few" in the crew had aided in battling a forest fire in September, May and the two others, who escaped injury, enrolled in the CCC approximately two weeks before the fire. Personnel records showed that May had received no special training.

FOYE SHOWS RECORDS E. D. Foye of Lock Haven, divisional manager of the CCC, told the jury of veteran woodsmen that Camp Cameron had "consistently held the safety records" for both divisional and state CCC camps.

He said in September the camp reported three minor accidents and no lost time accidents in 3,121 man days. In both June and July, he added, the camp held the state and division safety banners.

William Schooley, junior engineer and assistant to Getz, produced maps of the 134-acre fire area and testified that the bodies of four youths trapped by the flames were found 2,097 feet from the point at which they entered the woods on Pepper Hill. The bodies of Gilbert Johnson, crew foreman and one of dead, was found 1,160 feet from the edge of the woods, and a rock on which three youths stood and escaped the flames was 2,317 feet distant.

175 Present at C. E. Convention

President and Mrs. Francis E. Clark, who is co-founder of C. E. After the reading of the message from "Mother" Clark, the group sang her favorite song, "All Hail The Power of Jesus Name." Mr. Harry B. Scott, state C. E. president, was scheduled to bring the evening message. Due to an unavoidable circumstance Mr. Scott did not arrive till after the meeting. Brief inspirational messages were offered by Thomas Musser and Rev. L. F. Sheetz.

Saturday's activities began at 9 a. m. with a quiet hour led by the Rev. D. W. Carruthers, of the State College Presbyterian church. Mr. Carruthers stressed the idea of having morning devotions. Following that was a music conference led by Miss Betty Ann Hartwick, of Bellefonte. Next on the program was the Conference on Recreation, which was led by Miss Rose Zenn, who is our State C. E. Recreational Superintendent. Miss Zenn stressed the point "Social to Save." Following this was a "get-acquainted period" and lunch in the basement.

The Senior group met at 2 p. m. in the United Brethren church. The worship service was conducted by Jacksonville society. Following this the group was asked to choose from the study courses offered. The topics and the leaders were: "Old Testament Characters," the Rev. Nevin Korb of Lanser, and the Rev. L. F. Sheetz who led the conference on the "Life of Christ." The next group of conferences were on Christian Endeavor Essentials, Harry B. Scott, of Crafton, led the conference on Organization of a Local Society and Gilbert Strunk, of State College, led the conference on "The Devotional Meeting." Following these conferences was the business session. The main part of the business session was taken up by the election of officers.

At 5:30 the group was served a banquet in the recreational rooms of the church. The Saturday evening session was presided over by Rev. H. A. Housler, pastor-counselor of the County Union. Worship period was led by the Pleasant Gap Union Society. Following that was the installation of officers by Harry Scott, Pleasant View Union society was named by the president as the Honor Society for having scored the highest number of points on the society standard.

Clyde W. Meadows, brought to a close the convention by his inspiring message. He spoke on "Take Christ, Live Christ, and Give Christ" which was the convention theme. The Rev. Mr. Meadows made several challenges for the County youth. The convention was closed with a consecration service conducted by the Rev. Mr. Meadows.

While the older Endeavors were in conference at the United Brethren church during their annual C. E. convention, the Juniors were having a convention all their own in the schoolhouse and the Reformed church. Assisting in the Junior program were: Mr. Harry B. Scott, Mrs. Homer E. Gaunt, Miss Sarah McCoy, State Junior superintendent, and Miss Rhoda Sheetz, who is County Junior superintendent. The Intermediates also had a convention of their own. Those on the Intermediate program were: Rev. Robert DeBore, of Monument, who led a conference on "Old Testament Characters"; Rev. H. A. Housler, of Millheim, who led a conference on the "Life of Christ"; Miss Verna Ardery, of Bellefonte, and Harry Scott on "C. E. Methods." Miss Zenn conducted a brief recreational program before the Intermediate convention opened.

By the great interest and enthusiasm that was shown at the convention, we are sure that Christian Endeavor is planning to do great things this coming year in our County.
