

Court Hears Guilty Pleas

(Continued from page one) for the State laws give the Centre county courts no authority to extend clemency to Rockview fugitives. The fugitive's break for liberty has involved six of his relatives and friends in Washington county who are being held by authorities there on charges of harboring and sheltering a fugitive from justice. Several of them are suspected by police of aiding Lyeett to escape in a car. Lyeett, assigned an "easy" job at Rockview because of his physical condition, walked away from the institution on the morning of December 6, while acting as a tool checker for groups of workers. Bloodhounds traced him to Nitany mountain, where the trail was lost. At last Thursday's session of court, two other pleas of guilty were disposed of and a hearing in an adoption was heard. A habeas corpus hearing in the matter of James A. Ross, who escaped from Rockview in 1931, and who is now serving a double sentence at the Western penitentiary, failed to materialize when Ross Pittsburgh attorney indicated that he prefers to submit the case to Judge Ivan Walker on briefs, rather than at a hearing in court. In an unofficial comment, Judge Walker indicated that there is some question as to the Centre county court's jurisdiction in the case at this time. Edward G. Troy, of Phillipsburg, entering a plea of guilty to several charges of issuing forged and worthless checks, was sentenced on one count to pay the costs of prosecution, a fine of $1. to make restitution of the amount of the checks, and to serve 4 months in the county jail. Sentence on two other counts was suspended upon payment of the costs and restitution. H. B. Sellers, of Phillipsburg, who cashed one of the worthless checks, appeared in court as the prosecutor. Although Troy claimed he has never been convicted of any crime, it was brought out in court that he has been charged with crime on at least two previous occasions. Entering a plea of guilty to malicious mischief, Joseph Berry, aged 35, of Phillipsburg, was placed under a suspended sentence for six months upon payment of the costs of prosecution and approximately $300 in damage to windows, he admitted smashing. Judge Walker directed that the man be kept in jail until arrangements have been made for settling the damage. According to Frank P. Myers, proprietor of the Blue Moon Cafe

College Man Dies In Fall

(Continued from page one) to check the previous evening. The man's unconscious form was found at the foot of the steps by Howard Shadow, janitor of the building, who investigated after he heard the crash outside the cellar door. He had some difficulty in opening the door because Liptock's body was wedged against it. The man was bleeding profusely about the head. Shadow was assisted in removing the body by Chief of Police M. L. Kaufman, of State College, and State Motor Police officer G. L. Finkbeiner, of Pleasant Gap, who was summoned to the scene. The injured man was rushed to the hospital here in the Koch ambulance. At the hospital, surgeons found Liptock suffering from a badly fractured skull and lacerations about the mouth. Dr. Heston during his investigation Saturday afternoon found that the man had apparently been resting against the railing when he lost his balance and plunged head first down the stairway, landing on his head. Liptock, whose age is estimated at about 55 years, went to State College about twelve years ago and was employed by J. L. Wilson, State College contractor, for some time. More recently he had been employed by McCloskey & Co., on the PWA-General State Authority building program at Penn State. He is reported to have been paid Friday, and is said to have visited a tavern a short time prior to his death. He made his home in a small building at the rear of the Frank Foley home in Lytle's Addition, State College. Practically nothing is known of Liptock's life before he went to State College in 1923. He could neither read nor write, and no letters or papers of any kind were found on his person or at his living quarters. Four dollars in cash were found in his clothing at the hospital. Although he was known as "George" in State College, authorities doubt that it is his true name. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon from the E. E. Widdowson Funeral Home, North Allegheny Street, Bellefonte, in charge of the Rev. Clarence E. Arnold, pastor of the Bellefonte Lutheran church. Interment was made in the Advent cemetery.

Quarry Worker Killed In Fall

(Continued from page one) After hearing the testimony of those working nearby, and examining the remains, a jury empaneled by Dr. W. R. Heaton, of Phillipsburg, Centre county coroner, found death to be purely accidental and found no evidence of contributory negligence on the part of anyone concerned in the tragedy. Witnesses at the inquest were Orvis Quick, Paul W. Zellars and Walter Breon, all Whitecroft employes, and Ray C. Noll, general manager of the company. Zellars said that he and several other men were directed to move six cars down the incline to the wharf. The cars, standard size railroad hoppers, were anchored at the top of the slope by safety blocks and the hand brakes of each car were set, Zellars said. Zellars and his helper, one at the brake wheel of each car, took two of the cars down the slope. Then Walter Breon and Wolford started down with the others. Zellars said that as he crawled down from his car at the bottom of the incline he heard Breon shout. At the cars went by him Breon said that Wolford had fallen, and Zellars said he then saw the man's inert form lying between the tracks a short distance up the slope. When he reached his side there were no signs of life, he added. Breon testified that he saw Wolford disappear, but couldn't see him after he dropped between the two cars. When he saw his companion drop, Breon said, the cars were coasting smoothly and there was no jar or jolt to throw Wolford from his position at the brake wheel. Orvis Clark was hearing some ties near the track when he heard Breon's shout, he said. When the cars passed him, he added, he saw Wolford between the tracks. Mr. Noll testified as to the usual procedure followed in moving cars down the incline. He declared that when such cars are moved, a man is placed at the brakewheel of each car and the brakes of one car failed, the brakes of the other could be used to check speed. He added that every car sent to the Quarries by the Pennsylvania Railroad is inspected at Bellefonte, and that any ones having defective equipment are refused until repairs or adjustments have been made. At the inquest witnesses testified that the brakewheel Wolford was using to increase leverage on the brake wheel was not damaged. It was pointed out, however, that sometimes the brake stick slips out of place, and when such mishaps occur while a man is drawing on them, it throws him off his balance. It is believed that might have caused Wolford's fatal fall. Wolford entered the employ of Whitecroft Quarries on June 1, 1921, and had been employed there steadily since that time. Prior to 1921 he was in the United States Navy, and visited many ports of the world aboard a U. S. destroyer. William Curtis Wolford was born October 18, 1889, in Clearfield county, a son of Nelson and Margaret Shipley Wolford. He was 29 years, 2 months and 1 day old at the time of his death. Survivors include his parents, his wife and the following brothers and sisters: Allen, Lewis, and Mrs. Anna Armagaust, all of Bellefonte; Walter, of Chambersburg, Pa.; Mrs. E. M. Evey, of State College; funeral services were held at his late home on Route 322 near State College, Wednesday afternoon, with the Rev. Homer E. Gaunt officiating. Interment was made in the Meyer cemetery. —Ice skates, skis, sleds and wagons priced right at the Bellefonte Hardware Co.

The Stovers will move into their own home further west on the same street. The Poillards have occupied the Moore property for the past two years, and at this time the house has not been leased. —Monday evening Beverly Jane Oiler was a guest of honor at a surprise party given at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Martin on South Allegheny street, in honor of her eighth birthday. While the guests were seated at the table enjoying refreshments they were surprised by the appearance of Santa Claus who gave each a gift, and promised to see them on Christmas. Guests were: Virginia Miller, Dolores Martin, Mary Edith Daly, Barbara Toner.

Plant Site Value Fixed By Viewers

(Continued from page one) the McCoy and Linn holdings, but through the years ownership has become vague through changing the course of the creek bed, and through the breaking up of the old Fair Ground Association. Those who testified in behalf of the McCoy interests last Friday were John McCoy, Martin Cooney, George Valentine, all of Bellefonte, and Frank Baird of Milesburg. Other interested parties are Miss Anna McCoy and Miss Kate D. Shugert, Bellefonte. Several years ago when Council first proposed the erection of a sewage disposal plant, a tract of land, including the site of the old Central Railroad of Pennsylvania engine house and land north of the building, was acquired. Recently, when the proposal was revived, it was found that additional land would be necessary and action was taken to buy a section lying west of the original purchase and extending to Spring Creek. The borough tract extends northward to a point near the edge of the old Fair Ground race track. Viewers named to fix the valuation of the additional section were: E. L. Willard, and George S. Denithorne, both of State College, and J. Irvin Yarnell, of Hubersburg. Miss Helen Schaeffer acted as clerk to the Board.

VanZandt Names His Secretaries

(Continued from Page 1) Miss Chullison, according to the new Congressman, is thoroughly familiar with the work, is well acquainted with the setup in Washington, has contacts in every department and in numerous bureaus. Van Zandt pointed out that the appointment of this young woman to the post eliminates the necessity of spending many months training a new girl. The Curwensville man, named to the $3,500 a year post, is only 40 years of age but is one of the leading citizens of Clearfield county. He is a comparative newcomer to the field of politics. He is a native of Clearfield county and has resided in Curwensville for the past 15 years. Sheridan has been an officer in the American Legion since the World War, is a college man with clerical experience as the result of a large insurance business and his former affiliation with the H. and R. P. Railway and very active in child welfare and publicity work. Yesterday, Congressman-elect James E. Van Zandt announced he had already visited the Social Security, Coal Commission, Railroad Retirement Board and other governmental departments and agencies in the 23rd Congressional District, for the purpose of familiarizing himself with the work and renewing old acquaintances, he said, so that when I take office officially I will be prepared to start serving the people of this district immediately. According to the Congressman, the new Congress cannot open his office until 12:01 a. m. January 3rd. Van Zandt said yesterday that everything is in readiness so that his office furniture supplies and equipment will be moved in quickly on the morning of January 3 and will be ready to go to work before noon. "I will attend every session of Congress," he explained, "and come home on weekends when I plan to see as many of the people I am serving as possible. In order to represent the people of my district in the right way I will have to meet them and get their ideas."
