Choice refreshments were served during the afternoon. The Centre Democrat joins with the pupils and teachers in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Malone all possible happiness.

It's an Old Arab Custom
It's an old Arab custom at Tripoli in North Africa, when you're sleepy to lie right down in the street, catch forty winks or more, then wake up and go on with your regular business, according to the Libya Information Bureau at Rockefeller Center. Arabs simply pull their "bed sheets" over their heads when tired, lie down on the sidewalk and let old man Morpheus have his way.

Fire Destroys R. R. Station at Clarence
The contents, exploded and showered the boy's face with hot tar. He was rushed to the offices of a Snow Shoe physician where he was found to be suffering from deep-seated burns. After receiving treatment he was taken to his parental home. There, families who lost their homes and most of their possessions when the apartments over the Jurchik store were destroyed were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. John Duke and child; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wozniak and two children, and Mr. and Mrs. George Parney and child. All occupants, with the exception of Mrs. Wozniak, were absent from home at the time the fire was discovered. The Duke and Wozniak families lost all their household goods and most of their clothing, while most of the household effects of the Parney family were carried out of the building before the fire had reached that section.

The fire was discovered by several persons at about the same time at 8:20 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. When first noticed, wisps of smoke were seen issuing from the northeast corner of the Jurchik store building. An alarm was spread, but in a short time the blaze, which was found to have started in the basement, had spread into the store. The frame building, 70 by 96 feet in size, was soon a mass of flames, and the intense heat and smoke prevented anyone from attempting to carry out any of the store's large stock of groceries and merchandise. Although a call was sent to the Snow Shoe volunteer fire company, and although the Company's hose truck was soon on the scene, the fire had reached alarming proportions, and the railroad property at the north side was also involved. The burning at the rear of the store, housing the club headquarters, was the next to go.

A call was sent to the Logan Fire Company in Bellefonte, but by the time the local firemen had made the 20-mile run, the three buildings were doomed. During the height of the blaze the railroad building across the street, which was a mass of flames, and the intense heat and smoke prevented anyone from attempting to carry out any of the store's large stock of groceries and merchandise. Although a call was sent to the Snow Shoe volunteer fire company, and although the Company's hose truck was soon on the scene, the fire had reached alarming proportions, and the railroad property at the north side was also involved. The burning at the rear of the store, housing the club headquarters, was the next to go.

The roof of a large cinder block building at the eastern side of the street, owned by Mr. Jurchik, and used as a garage and storage building, was badly damaged. Telegraphic communication to Clarence was cut off during the fire when telegraph lines leading into the station, which also housed the Western Union office, fell in a tangled mass across the street. The railroad telegraph system was disrupted through the same cause. When it was seen that the railroad property was likely to be destroyed, employees and bystanders removed a large quantity of freight and other property from the building, and also carried out all the office records, thus minimizing the loss to a great extent. Residents of other nearby buildings had carried much of their furniture outdoors, or had carried it downstairs in preparation for a quick evacuation in the event the fire spread.

The chief loss was suffered by Mr. Jurchik, who in addition to owning the building, conducted the Clover Farms general store on the first floor. In the store at the time of the fire were a large new electric refrigerator, 2 new typewriters, an adding machine, a cash register, and a large stock of dress goods and dry goods which had just been received. So quickly did the flames spread through the store that Mrs. Jurchik, who was in charge of the business at the time, could not reach the safe to locate some $400 in cash in safekeeping. The store was fireproof and no fear, as felt for the money. In addition to groceries, dry goods and many other lines of merchandise, the store contained a modern butcher shop. Mr. Jurchik purchased the property from T. B. Budinger about ten years ago. At the time the fire was discovered Mr. Jurchik, who is employed as a State forester, was working in the woods. Upon his return home he found his property virtually demolished.

Mrs. Wozniak, the tenant, and Mrs. Jurchik were apparently the only persons in the building at the time, and neither could explain the cause of the fire. The only theory advanced was that something may have gone wrong with the heating plant in the basement which supplied heat for the entire building. Mr. Jurchik's loss is estimated to be approximately $30,000; loss to the railroad is estimated at $50,000. Other damage, including the loss of the club building is expected to total about $40,000. About half the damage is covered by insurance. It was reliably reported yesterday.

When the fire alarm was first sounded through the community, F. T. May, station agent, grabbed a hand fire extinguisher and rushed into the Jurchik store, but upon going to the basement found that the extinguisher was practically useless because of the scope of the fire. The Hall Brothers last night expressed the Centre Democrat to express their thanks to the citizens of Clarence, for their aid in saving their building from destruction.

Local Business Prospects Good
Industries Optimistic As New Administration Goes Into Office
A survey of Bellefonte's six leading industries reveals that an Governor Arthur H. James takes the association with figures, and is an expert bridge player. McNitt, for many years engaged in the lumber business here, was both a good bookkeeper and bridge player. McNitt, if alive, is now 68 years old. Although McNitt was declared legally dead by the Centre County court here in November 1936, more than seven years after he was last seen, no evidence has ever been turned up to indicate that he is dead—or alive. He dropped from his usual haunts as though the earth had opened and swallowed him. On the thousand-to-one chance that the man in Mississippi may be the missing Bellefonte resident, this newspaper has communicated with authorities in that state in an effort to prove or disprove his identity. Up until late last night no word from Mississippi authorities had been received. McNitt, it was recalled, really disappeared twice. On February 25, 1929 he left Bellefonte by train for Miami, Florida, to attend the Shanty-Striding fight. He was reported missing after the fight, but later telegraphed the Bellefonte Trust Company here for money, once from Florida, and once from Philadelphia.

To make certain that everything was all right, Trust Company officials, when they got the request from Philadelphia, arranged to have J. C. Johnson, of Lansdowne, a cousin of the late Lawrence McMullen, of Hecla Park and a close personal friend of McNitt's, appear at the Philadelphia Western Union office to identify him when he claimed the money. Accordingly on April 22, 1929, Johnson appeared at the Western Union office, identified McNitt when he claimed his money, and engaged the "missing" man in a conversation at the Walton Hotel at the pre-arranged time the following morning and when the hour for the meeting passed and McNitt failed to show up, he had him paged several times to no avail. Johnson said McNitt told him he was registered at the Walton, but the register failed to reveal his name. A search of other hotel registers in the city failed to show that McNitt had been registered in any of them.

In ensuing months State Police, in Enka Lodge, through the aid and other organizations participated in a far-flung search for McNitt, but since the day he was seen in Philadelphia by Mr. Johnson, no person, as far as it is known, has seen him nor heard from him. At the time of his disappearance McNitt's estate was estimated to total nearly $160,000.

The Titan Metal Company report is particularly encouraging. In January 1938, there were 299 wage earners on the company's payroll. This month the total number of wage earners, exclusive of office employees and salesmen, is 408. Present payrolls are running approximately $16,000 more per month than they were early last year. A somewhat less optimistic report comes from the American Lime and Stone Company, where employment records and payrolls are at about the same figures as they were last year at this time. Officials report that there has been no appreciable increase in business, although they have strong reasons to believe that an upturn is not far distant. The report of lime companies cannot be depended upon too strongly at this season of the year, for the demand for lime and lime products is light in the winter months even during normal years.

Whitlock Quarries reports that last week all available kilns were pressed into operation and that the plant is producing its top capacity of lime. The demand for stone is reported as being good for this season of the year, and the prospects for the first half of 1939, at least, are bright. It is reported that the total payroll, including office and sales force, includes 225 employees. Last January the total was 180. Payroll figures at the Federal Match Corporation's plant have held fairly steady during the past year, the average number of employees being approximately 170 throughout the year. An influx of orders, expected late in January and in February as depleted inventories are replenished. Summing up conditions, an official declared that while there has been no definite upturn in the industry, hopes are high and substantial gains are anticipated.

Because of the nature of its products, the Sutton Engineering Company's fortunes do not usually parallel those of other industries. Officials report that while business conditions this month are approximately the same as they were a year ago, there are definite indications of an early improvement. It was explained that the source of that belief lies in the fact that the company is receiving many requests for quotations. During the year the Sutton payroll remained steady, with an average of 23 persons being employed.

Although the Chemical Lime Company is operating under a trusteeship, it is still producing a substantial amount of lime from that industry. The trusteeship began at just about this time last year. On the Chemical payroll at present there are about 155 employees, or virtually double the number employed last January. Officials report that business has picked up substantially during the past three or four months and that indications for the coming year are most encouraging.

Man in South May Be A. McNitt
A Mississippi man is about 70 years old; is of medium stout build; has a full face; is partly bald and in other ways fits the description of McNitt. The Mississippi also shows a long association with figures, and is an expert bridge player. McNitt, for many years engaged in the lumber business here, was both a good bookkeeper and bridge player. McNitt, if alive, is now 68 years old. ATTEND HEARING ON VETS' HOSPITAL BILL
As a result of a joint meeting of 21 posts of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars from Centre, Clearfield and Blair counties at Phillipsburg, Sunday, a delegation of local war veterans went to Washington yesterday to attend a hearing in connection with a bill introduced in Congress for the establishment of a veterans' hospital in central Pennsylvania. Plans call for the erection of an 850-acre hospital somewhere in the central part of the state. The members of the local delegation to Washington yesterday included: Joseph Forster, Aaron Leit-zell, W. S. Zahniser, Harrison G. Kline, and Alex Stergakis, all of Bellefonte, and Samuel J. McMullin, of Millheim.

No Food is Fattening
Contrary to popular belief no food is fattening. The only fattening food is too much of all foods, declares Dr. James A. Toby, noted authority on nutrition. While being interviewed at his Rockefeller Center office in New York recently, Dr. Toby stated that single foods, such as potatoes, milk, bread, butter, ice-cream and cake do not cause overweight, but that the total daily diet may do so if it customarily exceeds the body's usual energy needs. Every year leaves memories of the hopes that greeted its beginning.
