Looks like we folks better build a boat.

Thrills and Chills So often we have heard this expression: "This world is all wrong. It's not the world but the people. The world is the same as it was years ago, but we are a thrill hunting people going for thrills in our cars for a thrill but more often we have a thrill sometimes some of us never knew what happened. We drink and smoke for a thrill. All we get is a headache and a hangover. We tell risqué stories and get a laugh.

We are afraid to let our children go out for fear they may never return. It is not only the young folks who are hunting thrills. More often we find it is folks who should have grown up long ago. Years ago when our girls were sixteen we knew where they were, but today we never know until the wee small hours of the morning. Then when they are asked where they were, "Oh, just out for a ride." And you know it happens sometimes with Dad and Mother doing the same.

So don't ever say the world is wrong. Just say the world's all right and the people are wrong. They say "this is a modern world," but I am an old-fashioned girl who remembers when we get a thrill out of a moonlight buggy ride or a dish of ice-cream with two spoons in it.

End of the Trail. Nearing the end of Life's journey Close to the end of the trail. Have we fulfilled our mission Or somewhere did we fail.

Sometimes the trail seems long, Rough and rocky the road, And often it seems that we Carry more than our share of the load.

Sometimes storms o'er take us, And we almost give up in despair, Then a ray of light comes shining And lifts our load of care.

With courage and faith in God We'll never fail to reach our goal At the end of life's long trail.
