Fry Farm Sale Totals $7,000.00 (Continued from page one) cattle brought a total of $3,900, and hogs totaled $986. Sows and pigs accounted for $98.25 of the total sale, with suckling pigs bringing as high as $8.25.

A yearling bull was sold for $82; a team went for $385, and another team was knocked down at $390. G. Mac Fry, after 33 years of farming, will retire from active participation in that vocation, but will continue to reside in the farm home. The land of one of his farms has been leased to his son, G. Elwood Fry, while the fertile acres of his other farm have been rented by another son, W. Brooks Fry. Mac will still have some 500 acres of land on which to plant a garden if the fancy strikes him.

In addition to the two sons who will follow their father's footsteps, there are three other sons in the family, namely: Hugh, of Smithport; Albert, of Pine Grove Mills; and C. Glenn, of Waynesboro. Author of the Pine Grove Mills item in The Centre Democrat, Mr. Fry is widely known and held in high esteem throughout the county. A comparatively young man, he is retiring at an age when he can enjoy to the fullest the benefits made possible through his 33 years of successful farming.

Probably the largest farm stock and implement sale this spring on the south side of the county was that of George K. Long, west of Madisonburg, the sale sheets footing up to $5,000. M. H. Swartz, at the Allison farm at Spring Bank, where no horses were sold, amounted to $4,500, and that of John Black, around $3,900. Daniel C. Bohn, near Old Fort, had one of the best sales in this region—$4,000. Mr. Bohn sold only the stock kept by him during his regular farming operations during the past few years.

At the Adam Reish sale, east of Rebersburg, on Friday, a cow sold for $130.50, and the total was around $4,500.
