BEFORE SELECTING PAPER

What kind of wall papers shall I choose for my home this year? This minds of many homemakers.

We must remember that a wall paper has the ability to change the apparent size of a room, Miss Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative of Centre county, informs us.

Plain papers tend to increase the apparent size of a room while the figured ones generally decrease it. A diagonal, a plaid, or a striped paper will do either depending on the heaviness, spacing, and direction of the most prominent lines. Inspect such papers carefully and visualize their effect before selecting themselves. Wall papers hide the unevenness of walls. Both patterned and plain papers do this equally well. The choice of color is important Remember that yellows and tans is a question uppermost in the add cheer to north and east rooms, while grays, greens, and blues make them cold and cheerless. Any of the colors are suitable for the south and west rooms.

> Light colors, continues Miss Butler, increase the apparent size of a room and intensify colors of objects near them. Dark colors decrease the apparent size and absorb colors against them. They also help to create harmony when bright colors are used in the room.
