not mangled. Sergeant C. E. Sprankle, of the State Motor Police, Huntingdon detail, reported that the automobile was dragged approximately 160 feet and demolished by the impact. The train, carrying a group of bankers to a convention in Chicago, was held up for several hours while repairs were made to the engine. The pilot had been damaged as had the steps of three of the coaches. A complete inspection of the entire train was made by railroad officials before it was permitted to resume its journey.

The time of the fatalities was placed at 7:47 o'clock, the special being scheduled to pass the Warrior Ridge site at that time. Rudy's watch also had stopped at that hour, investigators said. Bishop reported hearing the train whistle and then the crash. He was joined a short time later by Charles Edmiston, Penn Centre engineer, and others attracted to the scene. Coroner Dr. W. E. West, of Huntingdon, directed the removal of the bodies to a Petersburg funeral home.

An eye-witness of the tragedy is reported to have said that the men crossed the tracks from north to south, made a sharp circle on a grass plot, and then re-crossed the tracks. It was on the second crossing that the crash occurred. Residents of the area said the men had been in the Petersburg area during the entire afternoon, and it is believed they were on the way home when their deaths occurred. No one has been able to explain why they attempted to recross the tracks.

Harold Jackson, a son of Harry and Anna Mulberger Jackson, was born in State College on November 8, 1915. He is survived by his parents, now residents of Graysville, Huntingdon county; his grandmother, Mrs. Belle Jackson, of Lytle's Addition, State College, with whom he had been residing; his wife, the former Naomi McClellan; a son, Harold William, and five sisters and a brother, namely: Mrs. F. L. Lutz and Mrs. Calvin Albright, of State College; Helen Jackson and Anna Mae Jackson, at home in Graysville; Mrs. Kathryn Harpster, of Pennsylvania Furnace, and Harry Jackson, Jr., of Graysville.

Funeral services were held Sunday morning in the Evangelical church, State College, with the Rev. Jacob W. Zang, officiating. Interment was made in the Pine Hall cemetery.

Clyde William Stover, a son of Elias and Arabelle Aaron Stover and was born on June 30, 1880. He is survived by two children: Hazel Bateman and John E. Stover, both of Millheim, and two brothers and a sister: Harry Stover, of Lemont; Irvin Stover, of Millburg, and Mrs. Laura Miller, of Millheim. Funeral services were held at the Koch Funeral Home, State College, Sunday afternoon, with interment in Aaronsburg.

Simon Rudy, a son of Robert A. and Katherine Chesney Rudy and was born on October 23, 1900. Surviving are his wife, the former Hilda McClelland, and three brothers and a sister: John and Raymond Rudy, of State College; Samuel Rudy, of Lewistown, and Sarah Koch, of McAlevy's Fort.

assistance was given in protecting nearby buildings. Residents of the town report that had the wind been blowing from a slightly different direction, the entire town of Yarnell would have been seriously threatened. As it was, most of the flames and sparks were carried across a nearby field. The blaze was discovered about 11:15 o'clock by Mrs. Miller, who had been papering a downstairs room and who went upstairs to look for her twin children, whom she had not heard at play for a time. Arriving on the second floor she found the fire had broken out in a bedroom near the point where a stove pipe extended through the room. She immediately sounded an alarm, and the Milesburg and Bellefonte companies were asked for help.

Neighbors aided in carrying out some of the household effects from the first floor, but nearly everything on the second floor was lost. The nearby homes of Lawrence Shawley and Wilson Walker for a time were threatened, but firemen kept a close watch for falling sparks and prevented the spread of the flames. The house was owned by Mrs. Miller's father, Herman Koch, of Pittsburgh. It is not known whether or not he carried any insurance. The Millers carried some insurance on their household effects. Mr. Miller is employed by the Titan Metal Company in Bellefonte.

Francis Musser, State College, and Thomas Mason, State College, are alternates. On Friday evening, May 5, the annual meeting of the North Central District of the Order of DeMolay of Pennsylvania was held in the Presbyterian church at DuBois. Over a hundred attended from the following chapters: Trinity chapter, Bradford; Kane chapter, Kane; Knapp chapter, St. Marys; Bethany chapter, DuBois, and Warren chapter, Altoona, and Warren chapter, Warren, were also present, but do not belong to the district. The meeting was in charge of "Dad" James N. Deeter, St. Marys. District Deputy of Grand Council, Bellefonte was welcomed into the district by the District Deputy, the following state officers were present: George R. Dowdell, State master councilor, Bellefonte; Robert H. Breon, Jr., State chaplain, State College; Marion J. Vos, State senior deacon, DuBois, and Gordon R. Hahn, State orator, Bradford. David P. Portney, formerly of Bellefonte and now located in Johnsonburg, was the principal speaker of the evening. Both officers from Penn-Centre spoke briefly.

The following attended from Penn-Centre chapter: "Dad" Jodon, "Dad" Ben H. Herr, Francis Jodon, Edward G. Miller, Robert Breon, Luther Stover, Joe Woodward, Charles Jodon, Clarence Warner and George R. Dowdell. Burned by Gasoline Earl S. Husted, of Bodines, was badly burned about the face when a quart of gasoline exploded while he was at work on his automobile. He was rushed to Reistown, where he was given medical care. Although both eyes and the entire face were involved in the burns, it is believed that his sight can be saved.

515 'Youngsters' Ride Excursion

Virtually every window in every coach was opened, and cinders and dust had every opportunity in the world to mingle with the passengers. Oldsters were busy during the trip fishing cinders and dirt out of their own eyes as well as out of the children's.

Railroad officials were hard put to estimate the number of coaches needed for the run, for by far the greater number of tickets were not purchased until Tuesday night and yesterday morning. Consequently the coaches were crowded more than would have been the case had a better check on the crowd been available beforehand, but no one minded. In some instances as many as five small children were counted in a single seat.

Camera fans were much in evidence, swarming over the station, the locomotive and other points of vantage to get "shots" of the occasion. The Bellefonte High School Band played in honor of the visitors during their stay in Bellefonte, while a Little German Band which accompanied the travelers, also played at the station.

Although no accurate count of adults and children was kept, it was estimated that of the total, 315 aboard the train, 285 were children and 150 were adults. State College school authorities closed the schools early yesterday to enable pupils to make the trip.

Inconspicuous among the crowd, but one of the most important figures in connection with the excursion was Dean A. R. Warnock, of Penn State, who might be termed the father of the excursion idea. It was Dean Warnock who first suggested the excursion and who played an important behind-the-scenes part in making the arrangements.

When the train pulled out of Bellefonte for State College yesterday afternoon, approximately 100 delegates, persons who had purchased tickets here boarded the excursion. They were to go to the College and return immediately.

Plans are now under way to originate a similar excursion from Bellefonte. The train will probably be run some Wednesday afternoon in the near future.

Fishermen at Paradise Draw Record Crowd

You could live a lifetime of anglers' joy, sorrows, experiences, merely by watching the crowds who fished along the banks. And after the battle was over, a survey revealed that an exceptionally large number of good sports were present. Although fish war-riors were plentiful, not one major violation of any rule was reported. Good sportsmanship, and good humor prevailed, as did almost perfect weather. The only drawback to the warm, sunny day was that a slight wind made accurate casting difficult.

So great was the crowd that the premises were not cleared until after 10 p. m., even though fishing ceased several hours earlier. An accurate tabulation of the day's results showed that 1469 trout had been caught, and 1070 had been killed. Of these, 156 were brook trout; 170 brown, and 744 rainbow. The largest trout caught measured 22 1/2 inches and weighed 3 pounds, 12 ounces.

One of the most popular innovations at the Paradise this year was the drinking water container placed near the bridge opposite the administration building. Thirty ten-gallon containers of water were drained by thirsty fishermen and spectators during the day.

Art Neu, former national and international fly accuracy casting champion, regaled anglers with a splendid demonstration of the finer points of casting. His home is in East Orange, N. J. Later he gave instructions to many of the spectators. Fish Commissioner C. A. French was present throughout the day, and took part in the sport along the stream banks.

Officials at the Paradise expect a heavy attendance during the remainder of this week, but predict the usual falling off of anglers after the first week.

Reopen Whiterock Case

A hearing was held May 15 and 16 of that year, with Whiterock Quarries taking no part in the hearing. The hearing was not completed and was adjourned until June 6, but on May 18 a decision by the United States Supreme Court resulted in the Whiterock hearing being cancelled.

June 1, 1936, the trial Examiner filed a report recommending that the complaint against Whiterock be dismissed. July 9, 1937, after the Supreme Court rendered a decision in the Jones & Laughlin Steel case, the Union moved to reopen the Whiterock matter, and the Labor Board granted the motion. The Board then reviewed the matter and rendered its order of February 1938 against Whiterock.

The ruling of the Board filed Monday reopens the case to give Whiterock Quarries an opportunity to write into the record its story in regard to the charges against the company. At no time during the proceedings held so far has the company offered any testimony. It is assumed that if the further hearing is held and the company, presents its side of the case, the National Labor Relations Board will then render its final decision on the basis of the testimony of the discharged employees as well as on what Whiterock Quarries, Inc. has to say in regard to the matter.

You can agree with almost anybody if you have no opinions of your own.

Anglers Attend Annual Dinner

report on the trout-tagging project along Spring Creek. In the first two days of the trout season, he reported, 25 per cent of all the tagged trout placed in Spring Creek were taken out. To date, he said, an estimated 30 per cent of the tagged trout have been removed. The disturbing feature is that anglers have been able to remove half the stocked trout in little more than three weeks of the fishing season.

Mr. Trembley indicated that the results so far are not accurate, for all figures here reported were not compiled and the experiment has not progressed far enough for final results to be made known. Indications are, he said, that the project will prove that stocked trout move up and down stream for considerable distances; that their growth in the creek is approximately the same as in the hatcheries; that fishermen have been most obliging in reporting their catches of tagged trout.

"Jack" Knight, who now holds a teaching berth at Columbia University as instructor of the only known college course in angling technique, spoke of a new fly rod now being developed which will permit more precision in distance casting. He also reported that a fishing line, with a hollow center, has been developed. This line, being hollow, will float upon the water without grease or other dressing and will be a great aid to anglers.

He spoke about his solar theory—a law which contends that fish bite in certain periods of the day when the gravitational attraction of the sun and moon are directed to some particular point in the earth's surface. The theory, he contends, was first recognized some 200 years ago but is practical applications were not understood more fully until recently.

Herman Hazel, president of the Kiwanis Club, introduced Dr. Richards Hoffman, as toastmaster. Speakers heard briefly included O. M. Deibler, former head of the Fish Commission, and C. A. French, present head of the Fish Commission.

"Bill Pickle" Dies at College

Cramer, his parents, half-brother and sister moved to Illinois but Mr. Gilliland remained here. On January 24, 1877 he was united in marriage with Maria A. Fulton, of Centre Furnace, who passed away on January 30, 1937.

Survivors include these children: John, Mrs. James Huff, Mrs. Newton Weaver, all of State College; Mrs. William Worl, of Zion; Mrs. Fred Marshall, Bellefonte, R. D.; Mrs. Raymond Stout, Bellefonte, and Mrs. Robert Simms, of Philadelphia. There are no brothers or sisters.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon in the Evangelical church, State College, with the Rev. Jacob W. Zang officiating. Interment was made in the Pine Hall cemetery.

Up until about 1911 Bill Pickle lived the life of a hard-working, hard-drinking man, but in that year he met Frank Buchman, then secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at the College. A friendship between the two formed culminating in Bill going to Toronto as Buchman's guest, to attend a convention. Hearing an address by "Dad" Elliott, one of the convention speakers, Bill's conscience began to trouble him and he began to see the error of his ways. From then on he changed his way of life; slipping back to old habits occasionally, but for the most part living a well-ordered Christian life.

In 1927 he attended an Oxford Group houseparty at Birmingham, Pa. where he rededicated his faith and which marked the beginning of his travels with Group teams. He witnessed at houseparties in Northampton, Mass.; New York City; Briarcliff; Allentown, and in Canada, Ireland, England, France and Switzerland. His trip abroad was made when he was 52 years old. While in England he talked at length with the late King George and Queen Mary at a garden party at Buckingham Palace. He met many great men but was unaffected by it. He had been a visitor in the home of Henry Ford and was once a house guest of Thomas A. Edison. Since 1932 he had been a member of the Evangelical church, State College.

When Bill Gilliland was 11 years old, he was a drummer and his grandfather played a fife. They were taken to Harrisburg one day during the early part of the Civil War to take part in a review of the Pennsylvania troops by Governor Curtin and President Lincoln. An Bill was standing on the parade ground shortly before the review started, Governor Curtin approached. He stopped before young Bill. Then he lifted him up on a box and said:

"Play that drum now as you've never played it before, son." Young Bill did just that. Soon the Governor and President Lincoln approached, reviewing the troops. They paused opposite young Bill, and Governor Curtin introduced the lad to the President, who shook his hand and complimented him on his playing.

Among those present at the funeral of William Irving Gilliland in the State College Evangelical church were many distinguished out-of-town residents.

They were Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, formerly of State College, founder of the Oxford Group; the Hon. Miles Pillsbury, Dr. Morris Martin, both of Oxford, and Charles Haines, Philadelphia. They represented many thousands of Oxford Group followers throughout the world who had known "Old Bill," or had read his story in "For Sinners Only," a book that has been translated into 14 languages. Memorial services were also held in Pittsburgh, Erie and London. Numerous messages cabled by friends in Europe and America were read by Dr. Buchman. Interment was made at Pine Hall cemetery.
