PATTON BRICK PLANT IN DANGER OF SINKING

Patton residents this week expressed fear that their main industry, the Patton Clay Manufacturing Co., which employs 200 men, would sink into a mine cave-in.

An abandoned mine, on fire for the past six years, suddenly collapsed Monday night near the clay plant in Cambria county and sent flames shooting 12 feet into the air on the Hastings road.

State Motor Police were hurriedly summoned to the scene of the fire and cave-in and detoured traffic near the clay plant where worried officials expressed fears for the safety of their plant.

Three years ago this same abandoned mine caused nearby residents to abandon their houses when 19 residents of the homes near there were overcome by carbon monoxide gas. Officials fear the mine may be on fire as far as 50 feet underground. The mine which is causing the trouble was abandoned 30 years ago but was reopened by the clay company until it was closed again in 1932.

FARM RECORDS NEEDED FOR 1939 FARM CENSUS

The next census will be taken in 1940, and if farmers are to cooperate to the fullest in this important national undertaking they will need a good set of records for their farm this year. County Agent R. C. Blaney points out.

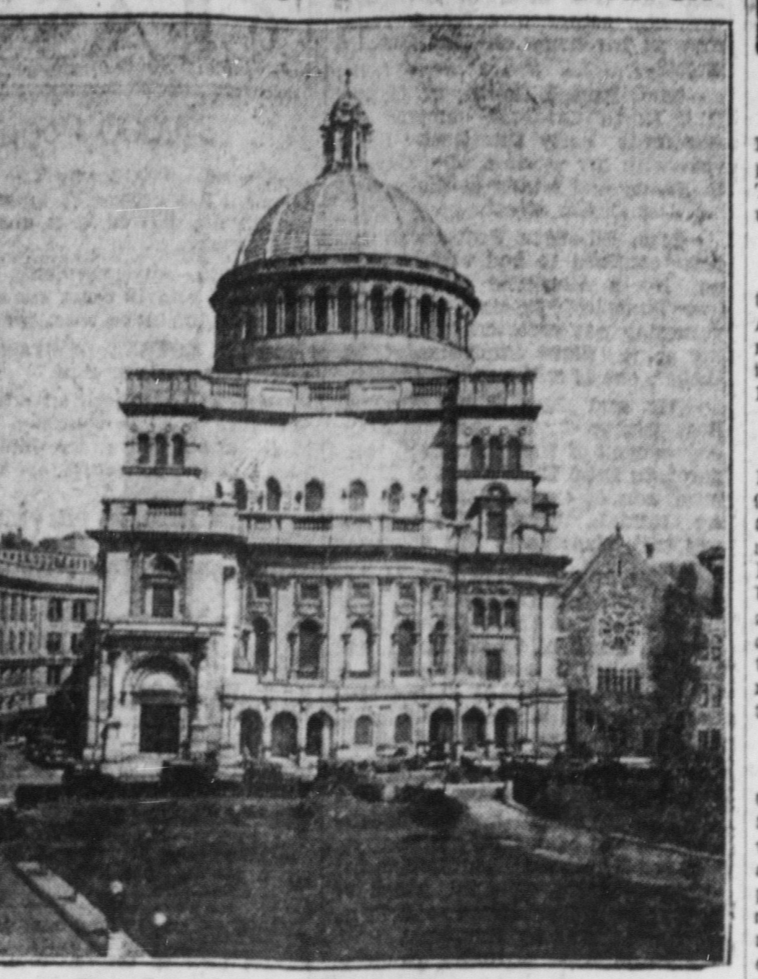

The census will cover 1939 crop acreage and production, classes of livestock and livestock products, uses of land, items of farm finance, expenditures and facilities, according to information received from the Bureau of the Census.

It is vital to the interest of every farmer and farm woman and everyone else that up-to-date, accurate figures along these lines be obtained on a county, state, and national basis, such as is done in the census. Records will be helpful to farmers in many other ways, and the County Agent will be glad to help start a good set of records on every farm in the county.

STRAIGHT CORN ROWS ARE NOW OUT OF DATE

The idea that straight corn rows are indicative of a good farmer is out of date, claims County Agent R. C. Blaney, particularly if the corn is grown on rolling or hilly land.

If corn rows run up and down hill, they provide splendid channels for water running off the field. Eventually, these develop into or cause gullies. When this occurs, the farmer loses any feeling of pride he may have had for his straight rows.

Many of the more progressive farmers now realize that it is much more desirable to plant their corn in rows following the contour of the hill. The best plan is to farm the hillsides in strips approximately 100 feet wide. Alternating strips are planted to corn, small grains and hay.

Even though a hillside is not farmed in strips, the corn can be planted on the contour and this will assist in reducing erosion. It will also be helpful in laying out the hillside in strips next fall. For example, if some of the corn is to be ensiled, alternate strips 22 rows wide can be cut for silage. These strips can then be put into winter grain with clover sown the next spring. The alternate strips can go into corn or back to corn and the strip-cropping system is then under way.

In planting your corn this spring, a good plan recommended is to run a contour line around the hill with a level beginning at the upper end of any old gullies. Use this as a guide and plant the rows of corn in the field parallel to it. Extension Circular 212, available from the Agricultural Extension Association Office at Bellefonte gives simple directions for strip farming.
