CAUTION SHOULD BE TAKEN AGAINST SUN BURNED EYES

Persons should be careful this time of year not to look directly at the sun while taking a sun bath. In many cases when a person stares directly at the sun, the lens of the eye actually causes a burn on the retina, in the same manner that the lens of a toy microscope heats to set fire to paper when sunlight is focused on it. The tragic result of these burns is often a permanently damaged area in the retina, reducing or weakening vision.
