Fishing they used it as bait fastened on a brook on the end of a half-inch rope. In a few minutes the tiger shark took the buit, and from then on for some time the battle was on. Because of the strength of the fish. members of the party handled the line in pairs, changing frequently as their arms tired. There also was some danger that the fish might attack the boat, and for that reason the shark was not brought alongside until it was thoroughly tired. Gaffs were then used to end its career. The shark was loaded into a specialprepared trailer the party had taken along, and a large quantity of ice was packed around it to keep it fresh on the journey home.
