

Over The County News

Crashhoppers for the first time in a number of years cut the bands of twined tied about sheaves of wheat, causing Centre County farmers considerable annoyance when "hauling-in" was in process.

Paul Ishler, former foreman on a highway section in lower Penns Valley, is now a guard at the Rockview Penitentiary, having started on his new job within the past week. He is a resident of Millheim.

Hunters whose headquarters are at the Slaek camp, close to Camp 62, met there last Sunday and decided to bring the season back to its former good condition before hunting season for big game opens.

Donald Miller of Spring Mills was so unfortunate as to have his hand caught in a steam shovel cable and have four fingers nipped off. He was employed on the Old-Fort-Potters Mills project where the accident happened.

S. Ward Gramley, cashier of the Farmers National Bank & Trust Company, Millheim has been absent from work since last week with a throat infection. He was taken to Lewistown on the advice of his local physician, for diagnosis and treatment by a throat specialist. At this time he is reported to be improving.

When the Luse apartments on the diamond at Centre Hall are completed one of them will be occupied by the Paul Fetterolf family while the bungalow will be leased by Bob Wetzel, who with Mrs. Wetzel and young son will set up housekeeping in it. The second apartment has been engaged by a State College gentleman whose name has not been given out.

The condition of Jean Livingston, 12, of State College, whose pelvis was fractured recently when a light standard on Main street, Lock Haven, fell on her when she was passing down Main street with her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Livingston, of that city, is improving nicely. Her grandmother, who was admitted to the same institution, last week for medical treatment, is in fair condition.

Acquaintances of C. Woodrow Hosterman, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Hosterman of State College will regret to learn that one of the twins born to Mr. and Mrs. Hosterman in the Huntingdon hospital died at birth and the other is being nursed in an incubator. The couple live in Huntingdon where Woodrow is manager of the Hoffman ice cream plant in that city while Mrs. Hosterman was employed in the retail department of the Blair Stationery company.

The Gephart & Gephart and Musser & Gephart tracts, along the Phillips Creek section, on the Middle Ridge and in the Narrows, near Millheim, were sold as to timber rights, recently to Lumberman Walter P. Fetterolf, of Madisonburg. Involved is a part of the watershed from which Millheim's water supply comes. Mr. Fetterolf will probably place a mill at some convenient point to cut the tract, which approximates some 100 acres and hemlock. The purchase price has not been made public.

Secretary of Highways Hughes announces two more roads in Centre county to be built this summer. One is on Route 45 between Rockview Penitentiary beginning at the end of the present concrete section on the Penitentiary grounds, to State College borough. The section will have a length of 5.13 miles, a width of 22 feet, with a Macadam top. The road at the junction of the Houserville road, will be over a new route, bypassing Lemont. The other Centre county road will be of concrete, beginning west of the borough of Howard and passing through the borough. The length is 4.48 miles, width, 22 feet. Work on the old Fort-Potters Mills road is progressing nicely. The indications are the construction work will be completed before freezing weather sets in.

Six young people from the Millheim Evangelical church attended the School of Leadership Training at Central Oak Heights last week. They are Betty Annman, Teade Barthes, Evelyn Brown, Esther Crabbe, Evelyn Eisenhauer and Marian Musser.

Rhododendron, or giant laurel, is in bloom at this time, and will be found along the borders of swamps or near streams, where at some places it forms impenetrable jungles of great beauty. The blooms vary in color from white to the deepest rose.

George W. Ishler, one of Centre Hall's oldest citizens, is seriously ill following a paralytic stroke suffered on Wednesday of last week. While in the yard at his home he fell to the ground and was carried off to his bed where he has since been practically helpless. He is being cared for by his daughter, Miss Gertrude Ishler, blind, but much alert, and Miss Anna May Martz, who has been at the Ishler home for several months.

NATURE STUDY MAJOR ACTIVITY AT BARREE

"Camp Barree is ideally situated and rich in opportunities for nature appreciation," was the enthusiastic comment of Miss Helen McCrea, after a visit to the Girl Scout camp.

Miss McCrea went on to make a point of the fact that nature appreciation in Girl Scout camps is just that, and not an elaborate course of nature study. The counselors are in sympathy with the out-of-doors program outlined by the Girl Scout Nationalist Marie Gaudette who feels that the more important aspects of this field should assist the girl by creating a hobby she may use anywhere in the world; stimulate creative thinking through reasoning and observation, and form an appreciation for the simple, natural things and see herself in relation to the universe.

The tendency of the program is away from collections by each Scout and the keeping of note books through each unit has a designated department of interest to the whole group and in the main lodge is a corner where a nature "find" is labeled and placed if it is of value to the entire camp. Three charts are kept by the campers in this corner for wild-flowers, trees and birds. In addition to listing birds that are seen campers are also encouraged to write the notes of birds they hear. Another popular nature adventure, especially for younger campers, is a hike in search of fresh water life along the waterfront.

Much to the amazement of some campers who arrived with the equipment to write the notes of birds they hear. Another popular nature adventure, especially for younger campers, is a hike in search of fresh water life along the waterfront.

EDUCATIONAL EXPERTS SPEAK AT CONFERENCE

More than a score of prominent educational authorities appeared on the program of the seventeenth annual superintendents' and principals' conference which was held on the campus of the Pennsylvania State College Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week.

The conference concerned itself with problems connected with secondary education and leading school administrators had the benefit of public discussion of high school topics as presented by members of the State Department of Public Instruction, as well as prominent superintendents and principals from Pennsylvania and other states.

The superintendents who were scheduled to speak included: Dr. Arthur K. Lewis, superintendent, State College; Dr. Frank C. Ketter, superintendent, Cheltenham Public Schools, Ekins Park; Ira S. Brinson, superintendent of Sunbury schools; Dr. Thomas Francis, superintendent of schools, Lackawanna county and president of the Pennsylvania Education Association; and H. L. Blair, superintendent, Warren county schools.

High school principals who were scheduled to appear on the program included: G. W. Lefever, principal, Gettysburg senior high school; William C. Kutz, supervising principal, Spring Township Schools; Mrs. Lavinia E. Baker, supervising principal, Bellefonte; M. N. Pank, principal, Latrobe; Carl E. Whipple, principal, D. S. Keith junior high school, Altoona; and Frederick L. Pond, principal, senior high school, Meadville.

Dr. Clarence E. Ackley, acting superintendent of public instruction, headed the list of specialists from the state department who were to appear on the program. Others included Dr. Henry Klonover, director, teacher education and certification and Dr. Paul L. Cressman, director, bureau of instruction.

Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, author, editor, and lecturer, of Auburn, N. Y., and L. H. Dennis, executive secretary, American Vocational Association, Washington, D. C., were still others.

NEW CLOTHES FROM OLD ON THE LIMITED BUDGET

Many times we wish we had an "elastic" dollar that would stretch enough to make ends meet. Any one who knows how to sew can almost convert an ordinary dollar into such a one.

Often the clothing budget is limited. You ask, "What am I going to do?" A one-piece navy blue suit, a yellow shirt and buttoned down front, and a two-piece aqua blue spun rayon are too tight. The seams are not wide enough to let out. I can't buy more than one new dress and it will have to be inexpensive. The only glimmer of hope I have is that I can sew.

You could slash the blue velvet right up the center front and insert a full length of three-inch organdy, heavy lace, or eyelid banding, says Miss Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative of Centre County. Attach the belt to each side of the banding so it won't cross over in front and have the belt fasten in the back.

Trim the neck and sleeves with the same banding and you will have a new dress.

A navy blue fabric that blends with the yellow shirt will save the dress. Remove all the front buttons and face back that edge and the button hole edge. Insert a strip of the new material wide enough to make the dress fit well. Down the full length of each side of this band, in the yellow fabric, embroider eyelets spaced about one and a half inches apart. Or you may have a shoemaker punch black or navy shoe eyelets into the fabric.

The dress may need to be shortened, so with this extra material made cording which can be laced through the eyelets. This will give you a dress that even your best friends would not recognize. The navy blue will show through the lacings and you may repeat the color with double collar and cuffs.

For the aqua dress, raise the skirt at the waistline and face the hem of the skirt if necessary. You may use the excess material for shaped godets in the side seams of the waist to remove any grain.

Instead of buying an inexpensive new dress, use the money to fix up three that might be "just like new." You might even have enough change left for a crazy blue bonnet that will give dash to all three outfits.

Who said a dollar had to be elastic? Certainly not anyone who is willing to make it stretch this way.

PENN STATE TO HAVE VEGETABLE FIELD DAY

Vegetable gardening trials and plant breeding tests will be reviewed in a field day at the Pennsylvania State College agricultural experiment station, Friday, August 11.

Dr. W. B. Mack, head of the College department of horticulture, announces that visitors will see variety trials, fertilizer placement tests, irrigation experiments, tests of starter solutions and growth hormones, direct seeding compared with transplanting, and experiments on the effect of loss of leaves in the vegetable plots.

Dr. C. E. Myers in charge of plant breeding work, has scheduled inspection of the extensive experiments on cabbage, peppers, sweet corn, tomatoes, and antirrhinum, or snapdragon.

Every time a person calls the National Headquarters of the Bulova Watch Company, at Rockefeller Center, New York, the operator answers with "The time is 1:16 p. m. Bulova Watch time—good afternoon; whom do you wish to speak to, please?"

OLD-TIME HECLA PARK THROGS

Willie was too near the edge of the lake and was kicking dirt in the pool which to grandma's way of looking at it would certainly result in a funeral. Willie would probably resist her threats and go on doing as he pleased. Finally, upon being told by the boatman that the water was not deep, grandma's fears were transferred from Willie's life to the water, for what ever got near the water without falling in and soiling his best suit of clothes?

Papa and mama eventually give the care of the baby into the hands of someone else for a time and took a stroll towards the dancing floor. Soon they would be whirling through the prettiest of waltzes, calling back memory to the recent days when they were lovers.

The dance over, they would wander around through the milling crowd, gratifying whims of Willie until the flying horses were reached when they would all get aboard and whirl themselves dizzy. Pretty soon Willie, who discovered that the chances of breaking his neck while bicycling were not so slim as he had thought, would not permit him to stand up and ride circus-fashion, wheeled papa into giving him some more nicks that he may seek comfort in ice cream, backed up with a bag or two of peanuts.

Thus it was all through the day of the picnics of forty years ago. In the morning could be seen the equine conveyances of all descriptions, intermingled with the sun-browned bicyclist, pedestrians and all manner of dust-covered conveyances. The old, slow farm horse was on an equal with his high-stepping brother from the livery; the old family spring wagon cut just as large a swell as the oil topped carriage of the banker.

On the grounds straggling with the mud dicated, mingled all classes, meeting old acquaintances and friends, shaking hands, joking, swapping yarns with companions of school days, accepting invitations to lunch of cold chicken. And at last dinner over you were prepared for the fun.

Somebody got some sort of amusement from trying their skill at shooting mark, watching the amateur foot races, swinging, dancing, rowing, music, baseball, etc. Benches were provided as they are today, throughout the grove for the accommodation of the weary. Barrels of pure water were to be found at different places and in addition to this there was a large tank with uncaps attached thereto.

As the day began to wane and the evening drew near lunch baskets were again hunted up and the remnants of the dinner distributed. After such an afternoon of enjoyment and recreation only can a cold lunch of chicken, jellies and sandwiches be appreciated. Every body was a trifle weary, but still in a jolly mood. Jokes were cracked at the expense of one another, the girls and boys tempted each other to partake of the inevitable pickles which always found its way into the lunch box on picnic day.

The feast over, the remnants with the few unbroken dishes were stowed away, and the care and burden of the now empty basket was turned over to Pop.

Then the fun began as the evening ushered in. Some vended their way to the train ready to depart for their homes. Some were off to the lake for one more ride in the boats. Others were attracted towards the dancing pavilion, while another portion of the immense crowd wandered aimlessly around through the woods finding pleasure in studying the faces and enjoying short talks with whom they chanced to meet.

Big folks, little folks, old folks and the kids scattered promiscuously over the grounds.

The latter, as a general rule, were much about children about the time of the departure of the trains and insisted upon playing tag across the tracks as the engine rumbled toward the depot platform.

The train finally came to a stand, but even before this the steps were alive with the swarming multitude who climbed aboard, not so much for the reason of securing a seat in the coach as for the reason of doing some feat a little more dangerous than an associate.

Everybody helped themselves in the scramble for seats on that train. No one respected any body else's feelings. Toes were tramped, women and children jostled about, and families became separated. Finally the whistle sounds for the journey home and everybody breathes a sigh of relief.

It was a weary, foot-sore crowd that stepped off the train as it pulled into the Bellefonte station, but one that was willing to do it all over again on the next big picnic day.

FARM CALENDAR

Timely Reminders From The Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture

Pullets Need Nests—When pullets start to lay on range they need nests. Failure to provide such equipment may result in cannibalism as the unprotected layers suffer from picking by their aggressive sisters. Penn State poultry specialists say that old egg cases or orange crates can be placed as nests at the rear of the range shelters if covers are provided to keep them from becoming wet.

Avoid Harm to Plants—Late cultivation is likely to do more harm than good if it is deep enough to prune or disturb the roots. Agronomists of the Pennsylvania State College recommend shallow cultivation and the use of wide V-shaped sweep in place of the last sweep. This will kill the weeds and leave the soil level.

Field Day Planned—A vegetable gardening and plant breeding field day is scheduled at the Pennsylvania State College for August 11. Tests of beans, cabbage, celery, peppers, edible soybeans, sweet corn, and tomatoes will be inspected. Some of these vegetables are in variety trials and others in breeding experiments.

Make Good Ice Cream—Home-made ice cream can be smooth and of good texture if careful freezing is practiced. Preparations of the freezing mixture and turning of the freezer are important in making good ice cream. Circular 165, "Making Ice Cream at Home," available from your county agent or the Agricultural Mailing Room, State College, Pa., gives detailed information.

New Lettuce is Good—A new variety of head lettuce, imperial 44 has produced the most uniform, solid heads of any variety tested at the Pennsylvania State College agriculture experiment station this year.

Control Potato Blight—Keep potato vines thoroughly covered with Bordeaux mixture, 8 pounds of blue stone and 8 pounds of lime in 100 gallons of water, to control late blight. Penn State plant pathologist recommends.

TREE BLOOMS OF BRUSHES AT NEW YORK DISPLAY

A tree that blooms with brushes has just been put on exhibition in a new display at the House of Homes in Rockefeller Center, New York. More than fifty new types of brushes, including a headache brush with bristles made of split whalebone to massage the brow, are attached to the branches of elastic knitted wire. Shaped like espalier trees in Versailles, France, the surrealistic tree is surrounded by sand gathered from the beach of Southampton, Long Island, after last fall's hurricane. The sand has been dyed in brilliant colors and mixed with tiny beads electro-plated with silver, copper and gold.

Among the unusual brushes on display are skittle-shaped walet brushes so named because they resemble old English nine-pins, knuckle brushes for softening rough hands, "tweedle" brushes with bristles of bahia fibres from Brazil, for tweed suits, and ivory shaving brushes with South American badger's hair.

"Dead" Girl Lives

Although she had ceased breathing for 40 minutes, an operation on the brain of a 14-year-old Chicago girl for the removal of a tumor was successful, and now, eighteen months after the remarkable feat, the patient's speech and mentality are normal, although she is blind and experiences some difficulty in walking.

1939 SECRET OF Easy Cooking
The NEW ELECTRIC RANGES

Timing Clock TURNS ELECTRIC HEAT ON TO START YOUR COOKING—OFF WHEN IT'S DONE

The watchful electric timer means unexpected hours of freedom—far from the kitchen. You can put the roast for dinner—or a complete meal from meat to dessert—into the cold oven of the electric range-hours ahead of the time you want the cooking to start—set the timer and go out for the day.

At precisely the right moment the electricity turns on, the cooking proceeds, and again at the right moment the electricity shuts off. When you return, there's perfectly cooked food, ready to serve!

GET THE FACTS

Electric ranges are now selling at the lowest prices in history—most any family can own one. More beautiful, more efficient than ever! Investigate—learn the surprising facts.

WASHINGTON WHITE HOUSE DESIGNED BY AN IRISHMAN

It is not generally known in the United States, or even in Ireland, that the White House at Washington, D. C., is modelled on Leinster House, Dublin, now the meeting place of both Houses of the Irish Legislature.

The residence of America's presidents was designed by James Hoban, an Irishman who emigrated from Dublin in 1785, according to C. M. Turner of the Associated British & Irish Railway of Rockefeller Center, New York. In 1782, George Washington offered a prize of five hundred dollars, together with a plot of land, for the best design for a suitable house for the President. Hoban won it with a design incorporating many features of Leinster House.

Wire in Child's Throat.

A three-quarter inch long piece of wire from a screen door was removed from the throat of Albert Russell, Jr., 5, at Greiner Hospital, Danville, and physicians are watching the child carefully, after an X-ray disclosed another piece in the child's stomach. He pulled the wire from the door while playing in the kitchen, and was removed to the hospital when a coughing spell led to the discovery of the wire in the throat.

LUCKY MOTORISTS GET FLATS FIXED ON BRIDGES

If a motorist is fortunate enough to get a flat tire on the new bridges and tunnels leading into metropolitan New York, he may sit placidly at the wheel while uniformed attendants change the tires—gratis.

The idea of the plan on the part of the road officials is to keep the bridge and tunnel traffic moving, according to a travel organization at Rockefeller Center, New York. The quicker the tire is changed, the quicker the motorist will be on his way—and out of the way, highway officials figure.

FREE AIRPLANE FLIGHTS GIVEN BY N. Y. MUSEUM

Ten free airplane flights a day, with the passenger actually flying the plane aimed at the public, is what they're giving away this summer as a World's Fair souvenir at the Museum of Science & Industry in Rockefeller Center.

More than 300 men and women from all over the United States have tried their hands at the controls of an airplane in flight since the Museum inaugurated its special "Wings for America" civilian aviation program last month. Drawings for flights are held in the Museum's aviation division during the afternoon and evening every day, following a talk on flying for amateurs, and the winners take to the air from Floyd Bennett Field plane, an expert training pilot beside them.

Those who make the flights receive a certificate stating that they have had actual instruction in the air, a handy thing to have since the time can be applied on the eight hours of dual instruction required by the government before being permitted to solo.
