FIT CHILD WITH HEALTH FOR COMING SCHOOL DAYS

Already children are beginning the parade "back home," coming from camps, from farms, and from other vacation spots. All too soon vacation will be a thing of the past and children once more will begin their long important year of education. Will your child be ready? Vacation affords the child a chance to develop his body, build new muscular skill, gather new experiences, and gain greater courage. With the first day of school the outlook changes. It is likely to mean early rising, long trips to and from school, hurried meals, and many new burdens.

The judges' decision will be given Thursday night and the winner of first place goes to the district contest which is held at the Farm Show in Harrisburg. Amateur hour winners will also be announced at this time.

Mrs. Roosevelt Views Woman's Part In World Of Business

The controversy about married women working has bobbed into the news again with the suggestion by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that the best way to combat the legislation to bar married women from state and local government is to bring out the "facts." "Efforts are now being made to find out what the facts are," the President's wife says in the August issue of "The Democratic Digest," publication of the Women's Division, Democratic National Committee, "and once they are verified I think women will have a basis for realistic presentation of the situation of married women as regards employment in general." The First Lady declares that so far as she knows the number of married women in industry now is "comparatively small," has very little effect on unemployment, and in most cases the women are employed in work "unsuitable" for men. On the other hand, Mrs. Roosevelt thinks that a "good case" can be made against employing more than one member of a family in local, state or federal government when the salary of one of them provides an adequate standard of living. "It is important not to create a

WAGNER REUNION

On Saturday, August 19, the descendants of John D. and Phoebe Ardery Wagner of Marthasville, held their fourteenth annual reunion at Reservoir Park, Tyrone. Although the day was wet for an outing with the accommodations afforded at Reservoir Park, they kept dry and spent a very enjoyable day. After greetings were made, dinner, which is an important feature of any family gathering, was served and enjoyed by all. Following the dinner Byron Richards, president, called the business meeting. After some discussion it was decided to hold the 1940 reunion at the same place. Byron Richards was re-elected president for another year, and Ethel Richards, secretary-treasurer. This session was followed by a very interesting program directed by George Ginzery, chairman of entertainment. A highlight of this program was a talk by Byron Richards on the family tree. He read three old letters that are in his possession which were of interest to all. One of these was a letter written to John D. Wagner, by his mother, Mary Shreffler Wagner, in 1830, requesting him to come home to Marthasville and provide a home for her in her old age. This mother had been left a widow with several children when John, the youngest, was only four years old. John dutifully heeded his mother's request and came to Marthasville and opened a wagon-makers shop, where he followed his trade the rest of his life. The other two were written by John D. himself to his wife while he was in service during the Civil War. In one written from the hospital at White Hall, Pa., he expressed

New Cave May Be 'Lost Cavern'

Housewives no longer have to suffer acute heart failure when they hear their door drop one of their best glass bowls on the floor. For now, according to a new display recently cleared for sale, is being made from a plastic that is guaranteed unbreakable. The new table accessories have all the luster of fine crystal yet are lighter to handle and will not chip or crack. Butter knives, relish spoons, tea sets, cake knives, and ice tongs also form part of the display. Because the plastic is easy to bend and bold, unusual designs are being created in table utensils. Among these is a sandwich server, shaped in one piece, somewhat like an ice tong, but having one broad flat surface and another that is slightly curved so that the sandwich may be picked up easily without being pressed out of shape. Picture frames, too, take on a unique appearance. The picture is fit into a top of the plastic glass. The frame is bent to a crescent shape. The new glassware is available not only in crystal but in translucent and transparent colors.

MOST PERSONS TWO-FACED SAYS THE SPECIALISTS

Studies recently made of facial physiognomy disclose that two sides of the average person's face are not symmetrical, and that most persons are literally "two-faced," according to the Better Vision Institute of Rockefeller Center, New York. Usually the differences are subtle and practically unnoticeable, although they greatly affect the general facial appearance. One eye may be slightly smaller than the other, or perhaps a little higher in the forehead. Differences in cheek bones, curvature of lips and shape of eyebrows are common. In fitting spectacles, modern eye sight specialists study carefully contours and by clever shaping of the lenses, subdue the irregularities in features. They can also, by varying the shape of spectacle lenses make long noses appear shorter, lessen the rotundity of a moon face, or reduce the length of a long face.

WOOL FOR CLOTHING MADE FROM FISH IN GERMANY

To add to her rapidly growing list of synthetic products, Germany has now developed a "fish wool" made from fish albumin and cellulose, according to the National Association of Manufacturers at Rockefeller Center, New York. Comparing favorably in strength, resistance to washing and wear, resistance with good grade fibre made by the viscose process, which is widely used in the United States, the new product is precipitated from a solution containing 50 per cent fish albumin and 50 per cent cellulose. When the solution is spun out, the cellulose coagulates first and albumin later, producing a thread with a cellulose core and an albumin outer sheath. —Read the Classified ads

Clinton Co. Considers Centennial Observ'nce

That may be received meanwhile, will be discussed Monday evening at another meeting of the committee with the officers and executive committee members of the Historical Society, to work out a more definite program and prepare the way for overtures to other organizations who should cooperate in making the centennial observance a county-wide community celebration. In connection with the idea of a Centennial-Armistice Day-Halloween parade, it was suggested that the prize fund should be distributed to large extent in awards for entries of a historical character. Horse Meat Popular Dish

France, noted for her pastries and fine wines, oddly enough, consumes horse meat as unconcernedly as we do beef. In Paris, according to the Postal Travel Service of Rockefeller Center, New York, there are shops which regularly sell horse meat over their counters. Butcher shops retailing horse meat, are required by law to carry a gold-colored horse's head over the doorway. Compliments cement many mere friendships than practically anything else. Hard work is hard work, you may say to that!
