ISAIAH: A LIFE DEDICATED TO GOD.

International Sunday School Lesson for September, 3, 1939.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Here am I, send me."—Isaiah 6:8.

Lesson Text: Isaiah 6:1-13.

Of all the prophets, Isaiah stands in the front rank. He lived in Jerusalem and occupied a position of wealth and rank, something like that of the prophet Amos. He was connected with the royal house. At least, he was the adviser of four kings, both in matters spiritual and of statesmanship. His place in the nation cannot be better described than in a few words than to quote Isaiah, who said:

Isaiah was a patient and painstaking teacher of religious truth, a bold and fearless preacher of righteousness, a sane and courageous reformer, a keen and far-seeing statesman, a large-hearted champion of the people and a divinely enlightened seer, penetrating the veil hiding the future and anticipating the glorious era when the Kingdom of God, a kingdom of peace and righteousness, would be established upon the earth."

It is well to realize the stage in history in which Isaiah appeared. The Jews could look back to a long line of national and religious heroes beginning with Abraham. The biographies of these men, the pilgrims to Egypt, the Exodus and wanderings in the wilderness and the final settlement in Canaan, forms a distant background of his day. Then had followed the reign of the judges, of which Samuel was the last, and the united monarchy under David and Solomon, during which days the prophetic office had been filled by Elijah and Elisha. Israel and Judah had divided and the era immediately preceding Isaiah in Judah had been one of prosperity and development under the rule of King Uzziah.

In Isaiah's day greater kingdoms were battling for supremacy, Egypt, Syria, Assyria, and Babylon, and the country of Palestine was affected by the united monarchy of the north and south. In the latter chapter of Isaiah the prophet relates the circumstances of his divine call. In the temple, he received a vision of the purity of God and realized the singleness of his own nature. This was followed by a consciousness of forgiven sin and the immediate recognition of the need for a divine messenger to his people. Confronted by this task, Isaiah unhesitatingly offered himself, saying, "Here am I, send me," and the record of his life shows how courageously and conscientiously he met the challenging problems of his day.

It was apparent to Isaiah that his people had gone too far to take heed of the warning that he was to give and he realized that they would regard the predicted punishment and exile, but he held out a hope of rescue and reestablishment of "Sion" and "Jerusalem" and this feature of his message is characteristic of him alone.

Isaiah was a man of deep faith in the power of God in the affairs of the nation if the people would only follow him and live in accordance with his teachings. He discounted the power of material forces and urged reliance upon Jehovah. Syria and Israel invaded Judah during the days of King Ahaz and while the king held to an alliance with Assyria for protection, Isaiah reiterated his firm conviction that Judah should depend upon Jehovah. More than sixty years later, when King Hezekiah called himself with the Philistines and Egypt to oppose the Assyrians under Sargan, who had just captured Ashdod, Isaiah again protested against his nation seeking strength and protection in any way except by so living as to insure the intervention of Jehovah in their behalf. For three years he walked the streets as a slave in symbolic prophecy of the coming slavery of Judah and in protest against a policy of enslavement to Egypt.

It became Isaiah's duty to carry to King Hezekiah the knowledge that his death was imminent. This was probably the best king Judah ever had, and in his consternation and sorrow over his impending doom, Hezekiah revealed the deep faith which was in him by praying to God for a prolongation of life. It was exceedingly commendable that Hezekiah had so lived that he could plead with God who he had "walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart and have done that which is good in thy sight." Touched by this plea, God lengthened his life for fifteen years and Isaiah returned to the King and told him of the divine elements.

Every one in a while, someone asks why there are no prophets today. These people misunderstand the role of the ancient prophet who was not so much a foreteller of future events as a preacher of righteousness and a far-seeing statesman. God has spoken to mankind in every age through inspired agents and in doing so today, we may rest assured. While these agents are not generally recognized until long after their death, we should recall that the ancient prophet was not recognized by the people of his own day, his doctrine was usually unpopular and repudiated, but in the course of time, the authenticity of his message became established and posterity accorded to him the high place which his vision and courage entitled him to.

We should be on the alert today to listen for the inspired messages which come our way, lest we, too, be engulfed in worldly affairs, fall to perceive the spirit of God which lies back of present day prophets.

15,000 RUG PLACED ON DISPLAY IN N. Y.

A Royal Keeshan rug from Persia—valued at more than $15,000 and containing some 12,247,200 hand-tied knots, has just been placed on display at the Museum of Modern Art, New York. The rug, measuring twenty-seven feet and ten inches by thirteen feet and seven inches, took five weavers more than five years to make. The yarn used was especially imported from Manchester, England. Before the actual weaving began, many months were spent in working out the design, which includes the Prayer Niche, Temple Lamp, Omar Khayyam's jug, and Cypress Tree, the symbol of immortality. All of the designs are bound together by a border of the Royal Vase pattern.

25 MILES OF WINDOWS IN ROCKEFELLER CENTER

Ample daylight is given to the more than 25,000 persons employed within the buildings of Rockefeller Center, by the installation of some 21,000 windows. More than thirty window cleaners work all day every day to keep them shining. And these windows if laid end to end would stretch for more than twenty-five miles.

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

To some house keepers croquettes are merely a possible use of left-overs and are likely to be served as a tasteless mass. To the housewife who likes her menus to have a personal touch, the croquette offers opportunity. On the outside they are golden brown and crispy, but on the inside, a creamy well blended sauce may bind together many things.

Concordia Chicken Croquettes

- 1/2 cup milk.
 - 1/2 cup chicken stock.
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt.
 - 1/2 teaspoon paprika.
 - 2 tablespoons each minced green pepper and pimento.
 - 3 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca.
 - 1/2 cup chopped cooked chicken egg and crumbs.
 - Frying fat.
- Combine milk, stock, seasoning, and tapioca in upper part of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point, and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add chicken and blend thoroughly. Cool, shape, egg and crumbs. Fry quickly in hot fat. Serve with mushroom sauce or with currant jelly.

Rice Croquettes

- 2 cups cooked rice.
 - 3/4 teaspoon salt.
 - 3 tablespoons milk.
 - 1 egg beaten.
 - 2-3 cup grated cheese.
 - 1 egg.
 - 1 cup bread crumbs.
- Mix rice, salt and milk together. Add beaten egg, cheese and cayenne. Shape into small rolls. Beat egg and add 2 tablespoons milk. Dip into crumbs, then egg and again in crumbs. Fry in deep fat until delicately browned. Serve hot with white sauce.

Macaroni Croquettes

- Cooked macaroni.
 - Cheese sauce.
 - Egg.
 - Bread crumbs.
- To cook macaroni, add cheese sauce and season to taste. Pour into a pan and let set overnight. Cut into squares, dip into flour, then egg and roll in crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

Crepe Sauce

- 2 tablespoons butter.
 - 2 tablespoons flour.
 - 1 cup milk.
 - Pepper.
 - 1/2 cup grated cheese.
- Melt butter, add flour, making a smooth paste. Add salt and stir milk in gradually. When hot add the cheese, stirring until smooth.

Asparagus Croquette

- 1 1/2 cups cooked asparagus.
 - 1 cup milk.
 - Salt.
 - 3 tablespoons butter.
 - 4 tablespoons flour.
 - 2 hard boiled eggs.
- Make a white sauce of the milk, butter, flour and salt. Add asparagus and chopped eggs. Mix, chill thoroughly. Shape into croquettes. Roll in cracker crumbs then in egg and again in cracker crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Serve hot.

Salmon Croquettes

- 2 tablespoons butter.
 - 3 tablespoons flour.
 - 2-3 cup milk.
 - 1 teaspoon gelatin softened in 1 tablespoon water.
 - 1 1/2 cups finely flaked salmon.
 - Salt and pepper.
 - 2 seasons lemon juice.
 - A slight grating of nutmeg.
 - Egg.
- Bread crumbs.
- Melt butter, combine with flour and stir until boiling and cook 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in gelatin, add salmon and seasoning. Bring to boiling point and cook 2 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Fry in deep fat and drain. Serve with a garnish of green peas and cut lemon, passing cream separately.

Veal Croquettes

- 4 tablespoons butter.
 - 1/2 cup flour.
 - 1 cup milk.
 - Salt and pepper.
 - 2 cups chopped, cooked veal.
 - Few drops of onion juice.
 - 1 egg yolk.
 - Cayenne.
- Melt butter, combine with flour and when smoothly blended add milk and seasoning. Bring to boiling point and cook 2 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Fry in deep fat and drain. Serve with a garnish of green peas and cut lemon, passing cream separately.

France Bids for Tourists With Free Gasoline

France has discovered that high gasoline taxes have discouraged tourist travel, and is now making her bid for tourists by offering $8.00 worth of gasoline free to all foreign motorists touring the country, according to the American Automobile Association at Rockefeller Center, New York.

American motorists are allowed a discount of one-half franc on every quart of gasoline that they purchase. Because of the high taxes and the low purchasing power of the people, the combination of which forces midget cars to predominate, gasoline in France is sold by the litre, which is about equal to one quart.

Scatched Furniture

One of the best remedies for scatched furniture is a mixture of turpentine and beeswax, the latter being melted into the turpentine until the mixture is as thick as syrup. Pour a little of this onto a piece of woolen cloth and rub well into the scatched parts of the furniture. Then polish quickly with a dry flannel and the marks will usually disappear.

Water Softener

To make water softer for washing, use 4 ounces of alcohol and 1/2 ounce of ammonia. If for toilet purposes, add to this one dram of oil of lavender.

Answers to Modern Etiquette

1. A person should develop enough self-control to suppress anger even verbally, but in a letter it stands as a permanent record, and usually the person who writes such a letter regrets it many, many times.
2. Unless the left hand is in use, which is of course necessary at times, it should be kept in the lap.
3. Only the gift from the bridegroom.
4. Not unless she is lame, or perhaps fears that he might suddenly bolt and run.
5. No. It should be worn on some other finger, or on the right hand.
6. Yes.

Weak and Run Down

Men and Women Should Take Lucetta's Iron Tonic Tablets, Containing Cod Liver Oil Extracts.

There is no doubt about the value of recovering from the effects of acute anemia. They suffer severely by engaging what has been worn out in the blood and nerves. They are composed of iron, extract of cod liver oil and blood building, tonic, etc., which restores the vitality of the proper tone and makes life worth living. They give strength and vigor to mind and body.

1. Should one ever express anger in a letter?
2. What should a person do with his left hand while eating at the table?
3. What jewels, if any, should the bride wear for the ceremony?
4. Should a girl hold a man's arm when walking along a street, in the daytime?
5. Should a ring, other than an engagement ring, be worn on the third finger of the left hand?
6. When a hostess pours coffee, should she place a spoon on the saucer?
7. Should a hostess invite her guest to dinner or for dinner?
8. Instead of saying "How do you do" when being introduced, isn't it all right merely to speak the name of the person, "Mr. Wilson"?
9. Isn't it rude for a person to discuss the peculiarities of one in whose home she has been entertained?
10. Is there a certain order in which the automobiles leave, following a church wedding?
11. For what purposes is the use of the knife permitted at the table?
12. Should a person proffer advice to another without being asked?

Health Letter

A musician's or a painter's hands are always considered delicate and amazingly dexterous. A boiler-maker's hands are delicate and dexterous, too. Every human hand is a complicated and intricate mechanism. Look at your own hand as you move it about. How pliable, how strong, how movable its parts are!

There are nerves, bones, joints, tendons, and muscles necessary to make the motions of the hand possible. The thumb has but two bones and all the other fingers have three bones. There are five boxes in the palm and eight in the wrist.

A lot of machinery to keep in condition. Yet no other part of the body is so often subjected to cuts, lacerations, penetrating wounds and abrasions as the hands. Even the smallest cut, a pin prick, or a blower may cause an avenue for some bacteria to enter.

Infections of the hand are frequent and often serious. After an injury to the hand great care should be taken. The wound should be carefully cleaned, also the area about it. The open wound should be covered with a sterile dressing. Cleansing an open wound free from contamination is a sterile dressing. An open wound of the hand does not necessarily call for strong antiseptics.

There is no better or more efficient cleansing substance than hot water and soap, sufficiently generous use of which may render an open wound free from contamination. If, after conscientious application of this first-aid procedure, infection threatens with its warnings of pain, swelling and redness about the site of the injury, serious consequences are usually averted by promptly seeking competent medical aid.

DO YOU KNOW

A higher percentage of the population is sick and under treatment in those countries where a compulsory health insurance plan is in operation than where it is not.

Human tears have great antiseptic power. Even when diluted as many as 6,000,000 times, they have been found to be destructive to certain microbes in the air.

HOUSEHOLD SCRAPBOOK

Drilling in China

When one wishes to make a lamp of a heavy chime vase, and a hole has to be drilled in the bottom or side of the vase, use an ordinary twist drill. The drill should be sharp and have a low pitch. The china should be kept wet with turpentine.

Cutting an Onion

If it is your intention to use only a part of a large onion, cut it so that the remaining portion contains the root. This will keep the onion from drying out so soon and it may be saved for later use.

Perspiration Odor

To destroy the odor of perspiration on the body, try bathing in a basin of warm water, to which two tablespoons of compound spirits of ammonia have been added. The skin will be clean and fresh.

Black Silk Gloves

The black silk gloves that have become shabby can be renovated nicely by mixing a little white of an egg with black ink, putting the gloves on the hands and applying the mixture with a soft cloth.

Kitchen Convenience

Keep a metal clip at a convenient height over the kitchen table to hold recipes while the preparing is being done. The recipe will not get soiled and will be out of the way during the process of cooking.

Light Scorches

Light scorches on linen can be removed by wetting the stained area with cold water and exposing it to the sun until the stain disappears.

Soiled Book Covers

Soiled book covers may be cleaned by applying with clean cloth a solution consisting of two parts kerosene and one part water. Rub briskly until the dirt is removed; then place the book upright to dry. Do not use this on leather covers.

Tender Meat

A tablespoonful of vinegar or a teaspoonful of lemon juice, added to tough meat, or corned beef, while it is boiling or roasting will make it more tender.

Water Softener

To make water softer for washing, use 4 ounces of alcohol and 1/2 ounce of ammonia. If for toilet purposes, add to this one dram of oil of lavender.

BASILISK; a fabled creature whose breath and look were fatal. "I had rather stand in the shock of a basilisk, than in the fury of a mercurial pen."—Sir Thomas Browne

UXORIOUS; excessively or foolishly devoted or submissive to one's wife. (Pronounce uks-o-ri-us, both u's as in up, o as in ocean, second syllable). "She wanted her husband to be uxorious, show his pride in her."

ABUNDANCE OF PEACHES
SOURCE OF CANNED FOOD

An abundance of fresh peaches this season probably will mean that they'll be well represented on winter supply shelves of Pennsylvania home-makers, says Miss Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative of Centre county.

Peaches will be put up whole, as pickles; canned, in halves; made into preserves in small uniform pieces; or lose their shape entirely in the process of becoming good peach butter.

The best way to can peaches is to pack them in glass jars or tins after a short pre-cooking, then to process them in a boiling water bath. Put up in this way in jars, in number 2 or 3 tin cans, they'll need about 15 minutes of processing.

Peaches simmered in sirup before they go into the jars will shrink a little and fit in more closely. This will also help to prevent a brownish discoloration that sometimes starts at the top of a jar of canned peaches. The preliminary cooking destroys the enzyme that starts this harmless but unpleasant looking discoloration before it has a chance to begin its work. Cook the peaches in the sirup only 4 to 8 minutes, but not until they are soft.

Good peaches to buy are fairly firm with few or no bruises. Avoid peaches that have small skin punctures with gum oozing out of them. Peaches that have brown spots may be the first sign of rapidly spreading decay.

JACK DEMPEY KAYES
ART OF HOME-MAKING

Hard-riding, hard-hitting men of the sports world are not supposed to be interested in the gentler art of home-making. However, according to a new display at Fedie in Rockefeller Center, three well-known champions are now not only interested but well versed in the art.

At the exhibition of "House of Outdoor Color" there may now be seen, three model homes color-styled by Jack Dempey, Michael Phipps and Count Theodore Rossi.

Michael Phipps, a world's speed boat champion, chooses a home with vermilion brown roof, shell pink walls, white shutters and terra cotta door. Michael Phipps, international polo player, chooses a deep purple blue roof, combined with pale yellow walls, white trim and yellow door. The ex-pugilist shows that home building is right up his alley by selecting an effective combination of blue-black roof with white walls, warm gray shutters, and a vivid red door.

The houses form part of an exhibition which represents the pioneer trend in house construction, designed to bring color to the outside as well as to the inside of the house.
