erating room is a valuable gift from the Women's Auxiliary...

It is easy to understand where the name "Old Sawbones" originated...

In another corner of the room stands a portable light with its own storage battery...

Speaking of sewing reminds me of the cabinet full of needles, cut-threads, and buttons...

And fiction it is. At the Centre County Hospital these sponges are checked and double checked...

The intricacies of our insides are now being lit up by electricity...

This tank stands beside an imposing glass cabinet housing an inspiring array of surgical instruments...

There are scissors of all sorts and articles that look like scissors but are called forceps...

Legion Home Is Completed

which was razed during the summer. Construction of the new addition included considerable remodeling and modernizing of the old portion...

On the ground floor, the entire half of the new addition, as well as the old portion, is devoted to grill rooms connected by folding doors...

Other first floor improvements include toilet facilities and a small but well appointed reading room.

The major part of the entire second floor is devoted to the banquet room, which is unusually well-appointed...

Those who aided in the construction of the extra wing as well as in the remodeling of the old portion, in addition to Mr. Dunlap who had the general contract were: Russell Witmer, plumbing and heating; Electric Supply Company, electric fixtures; and Andy Kadich, the electrical contractor.

Major Hardman P. Harris, speaker at the annual Legion Armistice Day dinner in the new banquet room, Saturday night, summed up the improvements admirably when he said: "You Legionnaires have a splendid home here. You well deserve it, and I know you will enjoy it."

From Soup to Nuts You Get Nothing But Disguised Soy Beans

Soy beans are here to stay!

Of course you've read a lot in the newspapers and magazines, lately, about the soy bean (some call them soy beans), but if you're not a farmer interested in learning how to control aphids or studying crop rotation perhaps you've wondered what all the fuss about soy beans is for, anyway.

While Hitler has been busy making butter out of wood; flour out of cornstarch and swords out of plow; the United States has been busy making soy beans the Thing the World Has Been Waiting For.

Soy beans, if you can believe circulars deposited in this office Tuesday by a bright young man who carries a package of roasted, salted soy beans around in his pocket, are the coming food. At the same time they are a boon for some of the ills which beset mankind and a delicacy for the table.

This fellow with salted soy beans in his pocket knows all the inner secrets of the up-and-coming vegetable. He told us that the reason we didn't like the soy bean soup which was served as an experiment at the family table some 20 years ago was because the soup was probably made out of cow soy beans—whatever that means.

But the soy bean has gone far in the last two decades. This week at Bellefonte (The Goldman Food Market, Adv.) is placing on sale a number of the many items which are being made entirely out of soy.

A Visit To The Land Of Enchantment

live house where he first got his inspiration to write still stands. Close beside it is the humble frame house which was his home. There, too, is the Mark Twain museum and the statue of Tom and Huck. High on the hills with winding picture-que drives is nature's greatest gift, the River View Memorial Park which is the pride of Hannibal. Here is located the Mark Twain statue, overlooking his beloved Mississippi. The Old Man River, since famous in song and story.

At the summit of Cardiff Hill is the Mark Twain memorial light-house standing as a shaft by day and a beacon by night, ever reminding one that the spirit and work of Mark Twain lives on and on. Hannibal is the meeting place of two transcontinental highways. No. 66 is the shortest auto route from New York to Los Angeles, and 61 from Port Arthur, Canada, to New Orleans. Many tourist courts with modern conveniences are built here to accommodate through travelers.

Wednesday afternoon we entered the state of Kansas—the battle ground for slave abolition factions of pre-Civil War days. It is replete with historic appeal. Repeated struggles between the Free State forces and the pro-slavery factions earned for the territory the sobriquet of Bleeding Kansas. The invasion of Coronado and his conquistadors, in the explorations of Lewis and Clark, the Santa Fe Trail, the cattle empire and the era of railroads—all have left Kansas studied with mementos of stirring pioneer life. One of these is the John Brown Memorial state monument, which commemorates the spot where this famous abolitionist was slain in a fought 400 pro-slavers. Here also may be seen Brown's cabin which served as a station for the underground railway, Kansas City, which ranks second in the meat packing industry, is noted for its parks of great beauty and scenic drives.

In Lawrence we visited the National Corn Husking contest, but visited its leading broadcasting station, "The Jenny Wren." The tranquil beauty of the city belies its very name. Hutchinson, one of the greatest salt mining and producing centers of the world, has salt beds which yield thousands of tons of salt annually.

We spent our first night in Kansas. Had lunch in Dodge City and the second night we spent in Ili's Camp at Syracuse, Kan.

Early next morning as we crossed the prairies we saw a mountain in the distance, the top of the highway, but it seemed quite dry, so we passed on. We crossed southeastern Colorado and entered the land of perpetual sunshine through the famous Raton Pass. N. M., at an altitude of approximately 8000 feet. The charming little city of Raton nestles in the foothills of the Pass. From Raton the road winds up the valley of the Cimarron, a beautiful stream where trout fishing is very shady pool, until you stop your car in breathless amazement, for below lies the calm beauty of a crystal lake—a crystal jewel set among emerald peaks. Which ever way you go you will travel through scenic grandeur for many hours. We traveled southward through the majestic gorge of the Rio Grande to San Juan. Santa Fe, today is one of the few places on the globe that retains the flavor of the past in a manner so unique and so delightful that the visitor hesitates to break the quiet or disturb the customs which make so charming an atmosphere. Today you may visit the oldest mission in America, the palace of the governors, erected about 1619, before the landing of the Pilgrims. Here, Lew Wallace wrote his immortal "Ben Hur." But we were too anxious to reach our goal and hastened on. We traveled for hours near the beautiful Sandia Mountains. About two hours drive brings one to the stupendous Rim Drive which climbs skyward to the very crest of the giant Manzanito range and spreads like a green ribbon of the Rio Grande valley, six thousand feet below you. It was our privilege to behold the glorious sunset on the Rio Grande, too beautiful to be described. Here lies the city of Albuquerque, the largest city in New Mexico and commercial center of the state. It is filled with strange contrasts and interesting history. It is famous as a health resort and extremely cosmopolitan because of this fact. But you will still see on the streets the wide-brimmed sombrero of the cowboy in from the ranges, and still hear the click of the high-heeled boots.

2 Overseers Denied Fees

many state laws regarding the administration of poor districts, and concludes with the finding that there is no provision in the law calling for the payment of $30 a month or $300 a year to Overseers of the Poor and that the petitioners failed to show that their services were needed by the Commissioners in closing the affairs of the Phillipsburg poor district after January 1, 1938. Because of the latter reason, the Court sets forth, it was not necessary to rule on the question of whether or not it was the Commission's duty to employ the overseers of the poor of the various districts. This question had been decided, anyway, in earlier cases, the Court holding that if any assistance was needed by the Commissioners in closing the work of the borough or township poor affairs, they were bound by law to employ the overseers.
