

THE WAR IN EUROPE

The idea that the present conflict in Europe is something of a fake might be dispelled by the realization that some five million men are in the field, 25,000 airplanes await orders to take the air, hundreds of warships are ready for battle and thousands of big guns are in position to belch forth destruction.

It may be a "fake war" to some impatient people but the governments involved, it is estimated, are expending about $100,000,000 a day in current cash to keep their war machines on edge. This great figure does not include losses of property, arms and indirect commercial revenue that cannot be computed.

Three Months; Little Fighting Even with these figures in mind, it is hard to realize that after three months of warfare, there has been comparatively little fighting in the West. Those who remember the World War recall that five weeks after the struggle began, the German Army had swept across Belgium and up to the gates of Paris. They were set back at the Marne and a few weeks later trench warfare began in Flanders.

Contrary to what was expected, the first three months of the present war show only a smashing offensive which crushed Poland, a French advance into Germany and withdrawal before a counter-attack was launched, sporadic raiding in the air which has been largely exploratory and for the purpose of dropping pamphlets, the sinking of many ships at sea and the invasion of the British blockade which has cut Germany from her sea routes.

Diplomacy and the "War of Nerves" Diplomatic manoeuvres have involved neutral nations as well as the belligerents. Following the rapid conquest of Poland, Germany put forth peace overtures and later the Netherlands and Belgium made an effort to get the belligerent together. Russia has exerted tremendous pressure on the Baltic States and the Allies have succeeded in attaching Turkey to their cause.

Germany Hesitates to Attack In regards to the possibility of a huge German offensive in the West, there are two views. The first holds that the weather will prevent any major undertaking before Spring and the other asserts that Hitler must do something before his war machine collapses under economic pressure.

Allies Depend Upon Blockade The inactivity of the French Army is based, in part, upon the same reason which have led the Germans not to attack the French fortified zone. The French seem to

The housing question schedule will contain about twenty questions concerning type and age of structure, number of rooms, conveniences installed, such as type of heating, illumination and the like; class of lender holding mortgage, owner's estimate of valuation and estimated rental value.

Employment Data As for employment, material sought will concern working status and training, unemployment totals and usual occupations. By ascertaining where respondents lived five years ago, it will measure migration of population. Education will be measured in an attempt to find out the average education. No questions will be asked regarding illiteracy since that has become almost a negative quantity except among the aged. The unemployment census is expected to be more accurate than that taken a few years ago when the correct amount of jobless employable persons in the land was sought.

Income over the last twelve months will be sought of all employable persons in wage or salary figures. This information will be sought for the first time in a census. It will, according to census officials, be kept entirely confidential and will not be available even to governmental agencies except in totals, such as city, county or state income totals.

BARONESSE REPAIRS 300-YEAR-OLD TAPESTRY

Untouched for more than three hundred years, a Renaissance tapestry from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine is now being repaired at the Pedac exhibition galleries in Rockefeller Center, New York. Not since Giacomina della Riviera lifted it off its loom back in 1690 for Cardinal Barberini, has it been stretched to a loom. Now, under the careful fingers of Baroness Wilhelmine Von Godin, it is being re-woven in many places frayed by the years.

A powerful blow with his gun, however, in the hand of Benjamin, broke the bear's back, and he released his hold and rolled over and died. It was a narrow escape for both men, but they had the satisfaction of securing bear meat to last until butchering time came along.

DESCRIPTION OF BOYS' TOWN

Byron Reed, an Omaha newspaperman, has written for The Centre Democrat the following article about Father Flanagan's Boys' Home at Boys Town, Nebraska, a non-sectarian institution for homeless, abandoned boys regardless of race, creed or color. The work of Father Flanagan has become so widely proclaimed that a brief description of the famous Boys Town will no doubt be of interest to our readers. "A visit to Father Flanagan's Boys' Home will convince you that Boys Town is growing. At the entrance to this famous Home for homeless, destitute lads is a marker which reads: 'Boys Town, Population 200.'"

"Looking over the six new buildings, which are now under construction, we inquired of Father Flanagan what the building expansion program would mean to the Home. "We are building for a city of 500 little men," Father Flanagan replied with a smile. "The internationally famous Priest didn't mention that he was going into debt for the entire building program because of the great demands that have been made upon the Home. Guess he has faith in the American people who for twenty-two years have helped him financially to care for some 3000 homeless kids. "Visitors are always welcome at Boys Town. They come here from every state in the Union, and many foreign points. Recently, R. E. Wenzler, Superintendent of the school at Soedertalje, Sweden, visited Boys Town on a tour of the United States. Stars of the screen, stage and radio are always dropping in on the little citizens of this unique village. Recently I have been informed Dr. I. Q. of radio fame, visited here, as did Ken Maynard, the cowboy movie hero and Jessica Dragonette, famous singing star.

"It is interesting to note that Boys Town has its own Postoffice, grade and high school, trades shops, swimming pool, gymnasium, athletic field, Chamber of Commerce, and city officials. Jesse Ruiz is the present mayor of Boys Town. And by the way, he is the only football player mayor in the U. S. A. "Speaking of football it must be noted that Boys Town is very football-minded. You see the high school's football eleven, of which Mayor Jesse Ruiz is captain, has been undefeated in five years of play. During the current season the team ran up its winning record of 35 contests without a defeat or tie. Boys Town scored 152 points this season to their opponents 17. "I asked Father Flanagan where his boys came from. He proudly showed me a huge map which indicated by stars that there were boys at the Home from 31 states, Canada, and one lad who came all the way from Korca, Albania. Father Flanagan also stated that since Boys Town has been founded there have been boys from every state in the Union, except four, and those are Delaware, Louisiana, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island. Boys Town has also had two boys coming from Alaska.

"Father Flanagan tells me that every boy at Boys Town has a hobby. Some go in for music, such as band or choir activities, while others are engaged in stamp collecting, building model airplanes, woodworking, etc. "Then, too, every high school boy at Boys Town is taught a trade. The following are some examples: Bobby West, from Denver, Colorado and George DeLine, Lake Andes, South Dakota, are learning how to operate an intertype machine in the print shop; George Kariskini, Miami, Oklahoma, gets practical experience in the Boys Town tailor shop; Billy Meagher, Denver, Colorado, is learning the shoe repair trade; Francis Pline, Davenport, Iowa, is being taught how to make butter; others are taught office work, farming, engineering, gardening, cooking, etc. "Father Flanagan says: 'There is no such thing as a bad boy. I have really never found a boy who wants to be bad. No boy really wants to bring sorrow to himself, his family or his friends.'"

And acquire experience which will enable them to perform the jobs which are traditionally theirs. NYA is also making the effort to give women related training which will make their lives fuller and the modern world more meaningful, thus enabling them to better cope with the problems facing their own sex and entire social group."

NYA Performs Varied and Worthwhile Tasks

(Continued from page one) More than 1700 young women of Pennsylvania are on NYA rolls as secretaries, stenographers, clerks, typists in community, state and federal agencies. In hospitals girls are employed in diet kitchens, laboratories, kitchens, laundries, and sewing rooms. They assist public health nurses and help at clinics. Realizing that a great many girls aspire to careers as nurses, NYA has endeavored to develop projects which would give them training along those lines. Co-operating with public health and hospital units, NYA has assigned about 1100 girls to this type of work throughout the state.

"We are very proud," says Mr. Scott, "of a new enterprise in the Phillipsburg State Hospital where plans are being made for securing making surgical dressings and slick room supplies for the hospital. The girls work in an excellent environment under competent supervisors who take pains to teach them. Moreover, they develop an intense pride in their accomplishment in filling this great need at the institution. About 450 young women are employed throughout the state on sewing projects in hospitals, children's homes and county institutions."

Mr. Scott also announced that the new Centre County Home has not been overlooked. A group of strong-arm NYA boys have been polishing floors and unpacking and placing furniture at this institution preparatory to its opening. With the co-operation of the county commissioners, who are interested in the progress of youth, a group of NYA girls will soon be employed in the kitchen, dining rooms, and performing maid service in the wards. "The National Youth Administration," says Mr. Scott, "is very proud of its opportunity to serve the old folks who will later be guests in the magnificent new county home. The county commissioners are to be congratulated in assisting to establish this work opportunity for unemployed boys and girls. But in addition to serving the county, NYA looks forward to the opportunity for experience in domestic work and care of the sick which the young women receive—not to speak of the environment in which they will work. This will rebound in great good in helping them to secure jobs in domestic work. To supplement their training, they will be offered free correspondence courses in home economics subjects, prepared by the Pennsylvania State College."

Library work is another field which offers possible employment to girls and has been utilized by NYA in planning its program for young women. The Centre County Library in Bellefonte is already enjoying the assistance of an NYA girl and plans are under way to extend the same service to Howard and Phillipsburg. During the past year, more than 400 NYA women were employed in many of the State's public libraries assisting the librarians in routine tasks, compiling reading lists, cataloging, and binding and repairing books. On large scale NYA book repair projects in different parts of the state, 23,250 books have been repaired and 359,000 volumes cataloged during the past year.

Perhaps the most effective work done by girls for educational institutions has been the production of visual education aids. With materials supplied by school boards and civic societies, NYA's young women have made wheel charts, spelling and arithmetic games, picture puzzles and other aids for elementary grade instruction in a number of Centre county schools. In this work, the National Youth Administration has had excellent co-operation from the State College Women's Club.

Another phase of NYA women's work is the recreational program. In the Bellefonte Community Center, located in the Y. M. C. A., the National Youth Administration has been glad to supplement the free service made possible to the children of this area. Says general secretary L. C. Heinemann, "this type of work not only affords the girls the chance to develop skills which lead to many kinds of private employment, but teaches them leadership and the acceptance of responsibility as well. It is the aim of the National Youth Administration, we have been informed, to devise a very wide variety of work projects for young women so they might have the opportunity to participate to a greater extent in the pursuits of modern life."

And acquire experience which will enable them to perform the jobs which are traditionally theirs. NYA is also making the effort to give women related training which will make their lives fuller and the modern world more meaningful, thus enabling them to better cope with the problems facing their own sex and entire social group."

In these shots will be seen an authentic newspaper office—not a Hollywood version with liquor bottles lying on the floor and reporters writing the day's news with their hats and coats off.
