PARABLE OF THE KINGDOM

International Sunday School Lesson for December 17, 1939

GOLDEN TEXT: "Incline your ear, and come unto me; hear and your soul shall live." Isaiah 55:3.

Lesson Text: Matthew 13:3-8, 11-23, 44-46.

Our lesson begins with the parable which we call the Parable of the Sower, and is the first teaching of its kind used by Jesus. While Jesus did not invent the parabolic form of teaching, there being several instances recorded in the Old Testament, he developed its use to its highest state and no one has ever equaled his employment of it. Someone has said that a parable was an earthly story with a heavenly meaning.

While sitting in a boat near the shore, Jesus told the Parable of the Sower to a large crowd which rested on the nearby land. Whether or not it was inspired by the sight of a farmer actually going out to sow is of little consequence, although the fact remains that the physical condition of that country meets the various conditions or soil upon which the parable rests.

Of the three classes of hearers described by Jesus in the Parable, Lyman Abbot has the following to say:

"The unfruitful hearers described are of three classes," he says, "the first hear but heed nothing; the second heed but resolve nothing; the third resolve but profit nothing. The first receive a hindrance on the outset; the second after the seed germinated; the third after it is well grown. In the first case the seed does not spring at all; in the second it springs, but dies before it grows up; in the third it grows up, but does not ripen."

Then, to return to the parable, some seed falls upon good ground, is well cared for, and produces fruit, sometimes thirty fold or a hundred fold. As the reader is evidently intelligent enough to feel that he is not described by either of the three types, he should ask himself whether or not the seed which he receives is bringing forth its return.

Should anyone be contented with a return of thirty fold if he has a possibility for a hundred? Intensive study of the spiritual life will produce greater fruit just as surely as such a practice improves the output of agriculture. Every Christian should strive to secure the greatest possible return upon his or her individual life.

Following the Parable of the Sower, Matthew's gospel groups six parables, which can be classified into three pairs, treating of the membership, the growth, and the value of the kingdom. Using simple illustrations, Jesus sought to make clear the fundamental nature of this great spiritual realm.

The present status of the kingdom is described in the Parable of the Tares. Like the farmer who prepared his soil, Christ has sown the seed of his spirit, but in the world not only Christians, but evil men are found, corresponding to the tares, inspired by the enemy, the evil one. It is not practical to separate the wheat from the weeds in the present stage, they are indistinguishable and to do so would destroy the grain, but at harvest time the division will be made. So, the Christian intermingles with the unbeliever, but the fruit of lives will reveal the true nature of each.

The activity of Christian forces should affect both sinner and saint, every effort must be made to reach all and include all, notwithstanding many will be found useless and of no account. The Parables of the Net explains the process. All fish within the range of the seine are caught, some serviceable, others not, but in the analogy, we see the process of differentiation being carried out, at the end of the sweep, leisurely and discriminatingly. In both of these parables the final judgment is not passed by men—neither the farmer nor the fisherman, but by angels, spiritual beings.

Jesus was engaged in a world program for all times, yet the beginning of his movement was extremely modest, even insignificant compared to its final goal. The Parable of the Mustard Seed was to prevent disparagement of a small beginning. The external growth of the church is exemplified by the mustard tree, springing and growing from a very small seed.

From a few men, with no organization, the Christian faith has grown to include 500,000,000 people, one-third of the world's population—a far-reaching goal to the twelve moderately trained apostles upon whose efforts the future so largely depended.

No one can follow the growth of the mustard tree, and the invisible growth of the Christian faith is typified in the Parable of the Leaven, which works out of sight, but which gradually permeates the whole bread. With grains of life from another world the leaven, by contact and intermingling, alters and transforms the large mass surrounding. So with Christian living, its steady, quiet, irresistible influence conquers. There is no necessity for proclaiming its nature, for it will accomplish its mission slowly, inevitably, and without question. This is reassuring to the faithful adherent of the kingdom.

In the parable of the Hidden Treasure and the Pearl of Great Price, Jesus emphasized the paramount value of membership in the kingdom. While the Treasure was found by chance and the pearl only as a result of diligent, intelligent endeavor, in both cases each finder fully realized that the find was worth all that he possessed. In each case it required all that the finder had to gain the coveted prize. So, today, we should seek to know the best to work for the best, and surrender all lesser things for the best.

The apostles answered Jesus inquiry and professed to grasp what his teaching meant. So they were told, if so, they should be able to bring forth treasure new and old.

In other words, they were not confined to traditional conceptions, that divine truth came in continually progressive discoveries, adaptable to the ability and capacity of each man and age to comprehend.

Unfortunately another window was broken from the Sheets home, the damage amounting to more than a dollar. Regulations will be in effect hereafter, if the ball goes anywhere near the house it will be brought into the room for the rest of the activity period. If by accident anything does happen the offender will be personally responsible for the damages. We think this will be the best for the interest of all concerned.
This is our last column until 1940. We ought to have lots to tell you considering a vacation from Dec. 22 to Jan. 2 on January 4th. Again, we welcome you to our Christmas program. And to you a most joyous Christmas and a blessed New Year.

YOCUM GRAMMAR SCHOOL NEWS
(Pleasant View, Pa.)
Last week we promised you that we would appear on the honor roll this week. Well, this week we don't feel so enthusiastic. Let's talk about something different. Not that none of the reports were good enough to be honored by publication. But, well let's get into the news.

Listening to the various conversations, looking at various drawings on the walls and enjoying the "goodness" of everyone recently, one would think that a festival season was drawing near. By the way, what date is this? Let's see now, the thirteenth of December, no, it's the fourteenth. What's so exceptional about that? The fourteenth of December, Oh yes, of course! Why how dandy beastly of me to forget. Didn't I too see that jolly old chuckling fellow up town? Why yes, of course. I understand now, boys and girls. If you'll excuse me, please I've got less than two weeks to shove: Let's see for Mickey. Signed, The School Mouse.
