'What the h--- do you fellows want? Do you want to drive us farmers out of town? If you don't want us, just tell us by having Daylight Saving Time.'
'Standard time is good enough for me. Why should State College tell us what to do?'
'It is to the interests of Bellefonte to keep the goodwill of the farmers, who are about 100 per cent against Daylight Saving.'

Serious Eye Defects Are Highway Menace

Periodic inspection of automobiles is reducing automobile accidents in many states. Defective brakes, improper headlights and wobbly wheels are detected and the owners of such cars are prevented from using the public highways until such defects are corrected. Unfortunately for highway safety, there are no regular check-ups on automobile drivers, despite the fact that statistics show that more than half of all Americans have serious eye defects by the time they reach their forties. Motorists' eyes do not stay in good shape indefinitely, any more than do their automobiles. About half of the states now have some sort of eye tests for driver applicants, although none of such tests are very rigid, according to the Better Vision Institute. In some states a person actually may be half-blind before he is required to wear spectacles when driving to protect the public. But none of the states require periodic check-ups of drivers' eyes. If automobile drivers were required to have their eyes checked every few years, highway safety would be increased. A person with changing eyes then would not have to run into another car to know that his eyes needed tightening up.

told him it was a holdup. When the man began questioning the stranger, he was seized from behind, punched, and tossed into the snow where his attackers punched and kicked him as he yelled for aid. One of the men went through his pockets and when Bezilla made a check-up he found his wallet, some money in another pocket, and his keys were missing. These items have not been recovered, the suspects deny they have them. According to police, the two Cleveland youths went to Utahville for a visit with a friend, Muhaw. Upon learning that Muhaw did not have room in his home for them, they decided to return to Cleveland and had Muhaw drive them to Philadelphia. The group was accompanied there by Dawson. The attack came after a round of Phillipsburg taprooms. The Cleveland boys told police that Muhaw did not take an active part in the crime, saying that he remained in the car. Bendyk was the man who stepped in front of the garageman, it was said. Straziska held Bezilla from the rear and Dawson went through his pockets.

'Surplus Food' Lunches Provide Balanced Diets

Fortunately for the many children receiving lunches under the school lunch program, the surplus foods available for these lunches are largely the very foods needed to balance their diets, the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation reports. The principal surplus food products that the corporation has handled include butter, eggs in some areas, a considerable number of fresh vegetables and fruits—especially citrus fruits—and some canned goods as well as such staples as flour, corn meal, and cereals. The official surplus list has thus included a good allowance of the protective foods, desirable in all diets but particularly necessary for young children. A school lunch program is always a co-operative activity. The federal agency delivers surplus commodities to the state welfare agency which arranges with local sponsors of the lunch program—usually the school, a local welfare unit, or the Parent-Teachers organization, WPA furnishes labor if the sponsors need help. The sponsors usually have to buy other supplies on local markets, but the distribution of surplus foods that the corporation buys when the wholesale markets cannot absorb them at fair prices provides a starting point that has encouraged this form of co-operative effort. Last year the school lunch program was in effect in 14,000 different schools and more than 900,000 children received the lunches. Officials hope that the number will be 5,000,000 by the end of the present school year.

'If all land owners in the State follow the course taken by Spring Creek property owners,' he said, 'fishing is going to suffer a severe setback.' After some consideration he added that such a move on the part of landowners generally probably would result in legislation to keep the streams open for the use and enjoyment of the public.
