The lone bather opened the door a few inches and peered out. A young man was running this way. At that moment, the bather, perversely it seemed, elected to toss a very wet bathing-suit into the corridor, hit- posed, ting the runner squarely on his spick-and-span flannel trousers.

"Oh. I beg your pardon," murmured the bather. "That's all right. Let me in a minute, will you?" Without waiting for an answer. the young man crowded into the tiny cubicle and hastily closed the door. "I like your nerve! Get out of here!

The intruder, dumfounded, wheeled and faced a very pretty, very wrathful towel-clad lady. "You'll have to excuse me, sistah."

he whispered huskily. "but I can't leave right now. Go right ahead with youb toilet. I won't look." "I will not," she answered hotly. "What do you think this is-a nudist camp?"

manded, "are you running away from the police?" "Gosh, no sistab!" he assured her.

"Then what are you afraid of?" she insisted.

"Tell me about it," she urged.

"I'm in the darndest jam you evah heard of."

"I was in bathin' today, too," he explained, "and I checked my valuables like they all do. I went back to the hotel, fo gettin' to claim my things. Poor Lighting Facilities Injure Human Eyesight

Convenience, cleanliness and safety of electric lights are of secondary importance when compared to the effect that lighting has on the family's health, comfort and enjoyment. according to Anne Biebricher, home furnishings specialist, Ohio State university, who says poor lighting is in a large degree responsible for poor exesight.

This specialist says there is more to good lighting than just a powerful source of light, which in many instances is a bare light bulb. Good lighting is easily secured by using enough light, avoiding glare, having a minimum of contrast, and directing the light properly.

It is best to make sure there is enough light for the task that is being done. Reading fine print or sewing on dark material requires more light than reading large print or sewing on light material. If possible have the amount of light checked with a light meter. There are two kinds of glare, direct and reflected. Direct glare is created when lamp bulbs are wholly or partially exposed to the eye. This glare can be eliminated by shading all lamp bulbs, and placing portable lamps so that no bulbs are ex-Reflected glare is caused by reflect tion from surfaces near the work and usually can be avoided by changing the position of the lamp or of the offending surface so that the glare will be directed away from the eyes rather than into them.

Light should be well diffused and distributed over the room, so there are no extremely dark places while the work area is brightly lighted. Proper distribution of light is almost as important as having enough light. Locate the lights so there will be no harmful shadows on the work. Right-handed people should have the light come from the left, while left-handed people should have light come from the right side when writing, reading, or sewing.

Lamps that bear the L E. S. tag mean that those lamps have met Wheah I come from, we don't sorta the specifications for good lighting as set up by the Illuminating Engineering society.

First Use of Windows

Is Traced to Egyptians

Egyptians were the first people to make use of windows. At that time they consisted merely of narrow slits between slabs of stone and were for the sole purpose of admitting light. It was many centuries before window panes were invented. These were made of thin slices of marble which admitted a certain amount of light and also gave privacy to the home. Windows of this type were first used in Greece in 430 B. C.

Apparently the use of glass in windows was invented by the Romans. Windows during this period were merely small doors which swung in and out on hinges. It was to an unknown Dutch inventor that the honor came of being the first to construct a window sash. This was about the middle of the Seventeenth century.

Meanwhile, various materials oth. er than glass, which originally was very expensive, were used. Waxed paper and isinglass were pressed into service. The window of today represents evolutionary processes that have run for 3,000 years and possibly more.
