100 Swans Visit River

Residents of Milton were treated to an unusual sight Friday morning when a flock of approximately Driver in One Accident Fails 100 swans was sightel floating gracefully on the Susquehanna River at the Blue Spruce tourist camp south of the city. The large, white birds had stopped to feed when they were first seen about 8:30 o'clock. They were said to be trumpeting swans, so-named because they make a peculiar, trumpet-like sound when flying.
