

IMPRESSIVE RITES FOR GIRL

 a strain for William Gates, father of the girl, and he fainted. He was taken in charge by Dr. Joseph A. Parrish, of Bellefonte, but later rallied sufficiently to be able to go to the cemetery where he joined the other members of the family as they came from the church.

Mrs. Gates, slender, alling mother of the girl, was almost carried into and from the church, her youngest brother, Roy Leathers, on one side and Dr. Harold L. Ishler, Howard, on the other. During the ceremony, which consumed almost an hour and a half, she was watched carefully by the two men and restoratives administered.

The five sisters and many close friends, including the Misses Maud Rager and Ruth Robinson, companions of the slain girl on her last night alive, and Richard Wallace, of Milesburg, who discovered her lifeless body early Sunday morning, were seated near Mrs. Gates who has been under the care of a physician since the tragedy. Mrs. Margaret Gates, Faye's grandmother, and Mrs. Nancy Leathers, her step-grandmother, were also close by. It was at the end of Mrs. Leathers' garden, about 110 yards from the house, where Mrs. Gates was born and grew up that Miss Gates was bludgeoned to her death.

Impressive Services
 The service opened with a Scripture reading by the Rev. Wallace Cummings, recently assigned minister of the Howard Methodist church. The opening prayer and the sermon were given by the Rev. Mr. Kline, pastor of the Howard Evangelical church, which was attended by the young woman. The 23rd Psalm was recited by the Rev. M. S. Q. Mellott, Beaver Meadows, former Methodist minister at Howard, who baptized Faye in the church in which her funeral rites took place. The Rev. Mr. Cummings pronounced the benediction.

Two hymn solos, "At the End of the Road," and "There is Only a Veil Between," were sung by Mrs. Harold M. Betz of Howard at the request of the family. Mrs. Harry DeArment of Howard played the piano accompaniment. Mrs. Betz, who has a fine soprano voice, remarked after the service, "Faye often said she liked to hear me sing and I did it for her."

Hear Inspiring Sermon
 Although hampered by deep emotion arising from his great personal affection for the young woman who had long attended and been active in his church, the Rev. Mr. Kline delivered a heart warming sermon which must have been a great comfort to her large circle of family and friends. Almost overcome at times during his 20-minute address, it seemed as though he could not continue and words were lost as he struggled for control.

He lamented the shadow which has passed over the community, removing by force a young woman for whom everyone had held high hopes. Turning to the Old Testament prophet, Amos, the minister borrowed the words with which he tried to comfort the mourning, lost Hebrews: "Seek ye him who can turn the shadows into morning." Six years he had known her, he said, and he and the church would miss her. We shall miss her songs and music, he sorrowfully declared in his closing remarks. Concluding, he quoted the immortal, sustaining words of "Crossing the Bar" from Tennyson's "In Memoriam."

Former Howard Man Jailed
 Appearing before the Union county court on Saturday, William Brobeck, of Howard, was sentenced by Judge Leshar to four months in jail and was ordered to pay costs and $50, allegedly stolen from the home of Mrs. H. A. Heath in Lewisburg, after pleading guilty to the theft charge.

Bride Watches Mate Drown
 While his bride of a week stood frantic on the beach, W. P. Banta, of Roanoke, Va., drowned in the surf at Sea Island despite the efforts of a life guard to save him. Banta was stricken with a heart attack a few minutes after entering the water.

Marion a Busy Girl
 Marion Kathleen Powers, 17-year-old Osceola Mills high school senior, is valedictorian of her class, active in school activities and winner of a college scholarship in an essay contest sponsored by the American Legion, but she still finds time to read. She says she usually reads a book a day.

Appointed Inspector
 Robert R. Spand, Millinburg barber, was recently appointed inspector in the State Department of Public Instruction. His duties will consist of inspecting barber shops and beauty parlors. He was formerly sealer of weights and measures in Union county.

Short Term Courses In Agriculture

Short term courses in agriculture at Pennsylvania State College are offered National Youth Administration workers, it was announced by Walter S. Cowing, State NYA Administrator.

These short term courses are part of a cooperative educational project sponsored by the State College with the cooperation of the NYA and Farm Security Administration. The project is one phase of the NYA residential work center program which is conducting courses in job orientation, shop work, and basic job experience at other centers located throughout the state.

The courses at State College, according to Mr. Cowing, are on a work-study plan, alternating study in general agricultural classes with structural work on several cottages being constructed near the college campus under NYA supervision. The students live together in quarters located not far from State College.

Students receive $30 a month, $20 of which is deducted for board and lodging and the remaining $10 allowed for personal use. The cottages now being erected by the students will eventually house all the NYA enrollees at State College and they are expected to be completed this summer.

Students for the short term agricultural courses must be from 18 to 24 years of age, in good mental and physical health, and interested in making agriculture their permanent vocation.

"Only those youth who have an active interest in agriculture will be accepted," said Mr. Cowing. "We expect them to either live or have lived on a farm, have had employment on a farm, or be able to prove to our satisfaction that they are interested in some form of agriculture."

The youth receive instruction in such fields as Dairy and Poultry Husbandry, Agronomy (scientific treatment of soil), Milk testing in Laboratories, Vegetable Gardening, Rural Sociology, Rural Economics, and English. Supplementing these scheduled subjects are lectures, debates, and participation in other cultural activities of the college.

Young men who are interested in identifying themselves with this activity should contact W. L. Scott, county supervisor for the National Youth Administration, the county NYA office is located in the Logan Fire Building on Howard street, Bellefonte, immediately in the rear of the post office.

YOUR HEALTH

Some people think of a depression as a hole in the ground. Others think of it as economic stringency.

A depression may be either of these—or down-heartedness. Mood depression, like other emotional states, tends to last for a long or short period and then disappear, leaving the individual with the normal feeling he had before his depression.

Emotional depression is as common as the cold.

Everyone, some time or other, is low in spirits. No one but sometime, is sad, down-hearted, blue, discouraged, or feeling down and out.

There are three phases of mood depression. The first is the appearance of mood alteration—the sad, or blue, or discouraged look and remark.

Then comes the period concerning the mechanics of the depression alteration. The depressed one loses his appetite, has no pep or energy.

He also loses interest in everything but talking about his feelings. The third phase involves the alteration of the individual's thinking. He dramatizes his feeling of depression by regarding himself as unworthy, as someone to be depreciated, expressing a real inferiority complex.

He may even develop feelings of physical illness having an organic basis yet tending toward hypochondriasis or disease fears. In most cases, depression of mood is a self-limiting disease which runs a course and ends in spontaneous recovery.

The danger from such emotional depression is the tendency toward suicide—the end-all of a progressive discouragement. Are we down-hearted? No!

RECEIVES MEDAL FOR LIFE SAVING

Toner, pulled from the stream by passersby, had ceased to breathe and showed no signs of life. Hayes, learning of the incident, administered artificial respiration to the unconscious man for ten minutes before natural breathing began and the man was taken to the Centre County Hospital for further treatment.

The "President's Medal" is awarded by the National Safety Council as a fitting recognition for those who successfully resuscitate by the Schaefer Prone Pressure method—a system devised by Professor Edward S. Schaefer for use in cases of suspended respiration caused by electrical shock, gas asphyxiation, drowning, and suffocation.

On the face of the medal in bas-relief appears a symbolic design which has its origin in Greek mythology. The three Goddesses of Fate, Clotho, who spins the thread of life; Lachesis, who determines its length; and Atropos, who cuts the thread of life work under the watchful scrutiny of a figure symbolic of safety. Engraved on the reverse side of the medal is the citation showing the name of the recipient, the date of the resuscitation and the name of the person resuscitated.

To date more than 1000 medals have been awarded, a number of them going to women. Mr. Hayes received his preliminary training in first aid work in Baltimore, Md., while in the employ of the Western Electric Company. About four years ago he took a special course in anatomy at Penn State College, and since entering the employ of the West Penn Power Company here three years ago has continued his first aid studies.

Hayes, married and the father of three children, has resided in Bellefonte since 1937.
