Poets' Corner

SPRING CREEK REVERY It is something very nice, I think In Summer's twilight glow, To roam beside the placid brink, Where Spring Creek waters flow. It gives the mind a backward stroll To bygone happy hours, Revives the limp and languid soul Like lilies freshly by showers. Will that great mass of rocks Stand there like some great city block Now to me they seem. Will autumn then bright flowers bring A hundred years from now? Will Spring Creek waters flow as clear As they are flowing now? —M. E. S.

MAY

Which season do you love the best, As each one swiftly flies away? The fragrant month of all the year Is beautiful and radiant May. In every wood and field and plain The breath of flowers is in the air; While violets grow on stately hills With buttercups and gaisies fair. One look at yonder mountain side With dog-wood in its white array, And lilies on yon hillside grave Remind one of the month of May. While blooms the shrubs and trees adorn All scattered with the leaves of green, No more gorgeous sight could one behold More loveliness no eye hath seen. So let not hours go fleeting by In blindness for each beautiful day. For there's no month in all the year Like beautiful and radiant May. —Mrs. W. J. Hackenberg, Rebersburg, Pa.

oca, or blind sacs. There are many species of tapeworms and some of them are so small they require a microscope to be seen. Tapeworms are flat and in segments, and they have hooks or suckers with which the heads are fastened to the wall of the intestines. An effective expellent will remove the heads and all.

How To Expel Worms

In buying a worm medicine, place full confidence in the contents and efficacy as stated on the label in accordance with the regulations of the Federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. Select a worm treatment that will not upset the pullets nor interrupt their growth and one that will help the fowl throw off the toxins which have been secreted by the worms.

failed to bite, and the only damage that accumulated on the rump came from the evening dew. NOTE TO ANGLERS: One of the county's newest recruits to the sport of angling was commenting to a friend along a stream the other day about the license badges issued by the Commonwealth to its citizens. "Look," she said, "you can use this slot in the back to hang the license to a chain, or the slot can be slipped over a button on your dress! The friend, more experienced, responded: "Yeah, but where's the license slip that's supposed to be in the slot?" The answer: "Oh, I left that home in a dresser so it wouldn't get lost!"

CORRECTION:

Although the office of Centre County Detective was abolished some years ago, the Bellefonte telephone directory still carries the following listing: "County Detective, Court of Sessions—394." If you call that number you get Swengel Smith, who is no detective. He is the County Sheriff, Probation, and Parole officer.

NICE BRIDGE:

One of the most noticeable improvements at Fishermen's Paradise this year is the new bridge erected across Spring Creek in front of the administration building. The structure, built to replace the one washed out by spring floods, is a masterpiece of solidly and fine timbers. Of cantilever construction, the main supports of the bridge are of solid oak timbers nearly a foot square. The bridge is supported on massive concrete abutments and the structure should withstand heavy floods without damage. If you like bridges, or nice wood, or massive construction, it will be worth your while to look at the new job at the Paradise.

PRISONERS' TALE:

Norman Hicks and Raymond Randall, who escaped from Rockview, May 23, and who were apprehended in Lock Haven, May 27, told court house attaches that they spent their first night of "liberty" in one of the large barns on the prison grounds. At one time, they said, two officers were so close to them they could have kicked them without moving from their hiding place. Later, when the fugitives went out of a woods onto a road, they saw searchers closing in on them. A truck parked nearby while repairs were being made seemed to offer a hiding place, so they leaped into the rear of the vehicle. The driver didn't hear them or see them and went on with his work. During their time at liberty, the two men lived almost entirely on 15 chocolate bars which they had obtained somewhere. They said that their plan was to catch a fast freight out of Lock Haven and go west, but they were taken into custody before the plan could be carried out.

SALESMANSHIP:

Monday night there appeared before the Elks committee arranging for the Flag Day celebration one Jack Vosburgh, Penn State student who earns part of his college expenses performing sleight-of-hand and magic. He asked whether his services might not be needed for the celebration. The committee was something less than lukewarm. A newspaperman present, seeing possibilities for a little free entertainment, hinted that a demonstration would not be amiss. Forthwith Vosburgh produced a deck of cards and gave a ten-minute performance. The committee enthusiastically hired him on the spot. He'll give performances at the Elks, Legion, and Undine homes during dances which are to conclude the Flag Day program.

Army To Expand In All Branches

District Recruiting Service Prepared to Accept Enlistments

The United States Army will shortly start an extensive recruiting program to increase the land forces of the United States. Opportunities will be open for all unmarried men between the ages of 18 and 35 who are of good physique and character. This army increase will include all branches of the army but it is expected to particularly provide for a large increase in our Air Corps and Anti-Aircraft Artillery. The present state of our country's preparedness demands that these two services be immediately increased. We need ten times the number of airplanes we now have and a much larger increase in anti-aircraft. Tanks and armored cars are a vital necessity for modern armies.

The men expected to volunteer for enlistment in the army will be trained in the use of these newer types of equipment. The army will also train a large number of mechanics for aircraft and motor vehicles. This training should be of great value to any man in later civilian life. The following vacancies were received by the Lock Haven recruiting station to be effective at once. Quota unlimited.
