Just heard of a party going fishing on Sunday. It is appalling to think that our law making officials are so narrow minded that they cannot see that this is against God's Law. Then again a car load of young men went to a ball game on the Sabbath day. That is not in accord with God's plan for the Sabbath day. It is high time that our nation get back to God's way of living or it will be doomed for destruction like the European nations are today. Sabbath Day was made for man and not man for the Sabbath.

A FAREWELL TO PARIS

The following was published in the Williamsport Sun with this interpretation: This tribute to Paris was not originally written for publication. It was the emotional outpour of one deeply affected by the destruction of something loved. Permission to print it was obtained from the writer, Simon Ungard. Her reporter accidentally came upon the scrawled sheets of "A Farewell to Paris."

A quotation often heard in Europe says: See Paris and die! In those words is found the reason for not defending that beautiful city. The general staff wanted to sacrifice Paris, the French people refused, for to them Paris is more than their capital. It is their soul and their home.

It represents to them the French race, centuries of progress, culture and high cultivation. Paris has given so much that it is good to the world at large and its people, the destruction of that city was to ring the death knell for the annihilation of France and with it all it stands for.

There is no reason as yet to believe Paris can be saved, but it was a chance France had to take. Who could blame her? Paris of the future if saved will never be the same old city that I have known and that so many others have seen and loved. Paris with its culture and intellect, its vivacity, its pleasures and its joys, with its misery and heart-break too—will not live again in our time.

Its spirit will be broken. Its wonderful buildings, its statues and priceless other treasures alone will stand as a monument, or shall I say tombstone, to the Paris that was! Never mind! O Paris, history will remember you always for your magnificent past and eternal glory!

Millions of French men and women will wish that they might never have been born to know you and then with helpless tragic tears in their eyes witness your probable destruction. French people of today will visualize a Paris of the future because to do so will not stop the raging revolt of their soul, the gradual pain in their heart. Neither will it stop the agonizing memory of the Paris of other years. Only one silent cry for ever more will rise to curse the race responsible for one of history's darkest deeds.

One does not miss what one never had. The future generation of France will find consolation only in the fact that their eyes have not seen the old Paris, their heart and soul never vibrated to the everlasting charm of its life.

How could anyone forget? With our desperate good-bye to you, Paris, goes another farewell to a century of progress and culture and all those things that stood in the way of folly, intolerance, barbarism, hate and the incredible cruelty of mankind.

Paris, beloved, in your abject humiliation my heart bleeds as I salute you!

Sunday School Lesson

first and foremost, Jonah could not escape the nationalistic feeling common to his race and apparently could not help but delight in the misfortunes which came to those of other races round about. When God spared the city of Nineveh Jonah became despondent and grieved, for he felt that God had dealt a good opportunity of wiping out a city which would some day become the enemy of the Jews.

Instead of delighting in the salvation of the people of Nineveh and going back to his work in Jerusalem with good heart, Jonah staid and God reproached with him because of his anger, but to no avail. To protect him from the intense heat of the desert sun, God caused a vine to grow up over his head with almost magical swiftness. This pleased Jonah greatly, but as quickly as it grew God caused it to wither. This angered the prophet so much, that he expressed a wish to die. Jonah had lost his sense of perspective. He was displeased when God saved the lives of thousands of people from destruction, but "took great content" when the same God provided safety from the burning sun for his own comfort.

God said, "Thou hast had regard for the gourd, for which thou hast not labored, neither madest it grow: And should not I have regard for Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than six score thousand persons...?"

Dr. Campbell Morgan declares: "God cares for the suffering, the dying, the dead world. Whatever the conditions of men maybe, or whatever the will of God is heard saying, 'Should not I have pity?' Both Jonah and Jesus beheld the city and wept over it. Thus the voices of Jonah today calls us not only to know God, but to be in sympathy with him, to feel his pity, to carry out his activity and to show to men what a God he really is."
