said he pulled to the left of the road to avoid striking the lad, but that as the truck drew near, the youth stopped, turned around in the road and attempted to go back. The front end of the machine struck him, causing a fracture of the skull, and fractures of one arm and leg.

The truck, which hit the boy near the left side of the highway, continued on, ran off the left berm and across a small parking area. Going into a skid in the soft earth and wet grass, it turned over completely and came to rest on its wheels in a soggy field. One side of the cab was slightly damaged, but the driver escaped with bruises about one arm.

No one, apparently, witnessed the accident with the exception of the truck driver who was alone.

Centre County Coroner Charles Sheckler, of Milesburg, summoned to the scene, ruled that the accident was unavoidable, and deemed an invest.

The first two fatalities of the week resulted when Robert C. Tamm, 50, and his daughter, Donnal Ann, 12, of Jersey Shore, lost their lives when the family car struck a concrete headwall at Julian, Friday afternoon.

crime scene and other items. District Attorney Musser W. Gettig last week filed notice with the court that the Commonwealth has none of the above items, but admitted having the "death stone" and photos showing the wounds of the deceased.

Judge Walker's decision granting the defense plea sets forth that the District Attorney or persons named by the instrument which caused the death of Faye Gates, and in order to expedite the trial of said cause and avoid any possible delay at that time it is hereby directed that any expert witness that the defendant may decide upon shall have the right to examine the stone in the presence of the District Attorney or anyone designated by the District Attorney, and at a location to be determined by the District Attorney. It further appearing to the Court that it was contended by the counsel for defense that it was his desire to have an expert examine the stone and the alleged wounds on the head of the deceased to determine whether or not they could be caused by this particular stone, whereupon it is further ordered that the District Attorney shall permit any expert to examine a picture showing the head wounds of the deceased, in the presence of the District Attorney at a time and place to be designated by the District Attorney, or in the presence of anyone the District Attorney shall determine to be present.

Kathryn Weaver, Lemont housekeeper, who lives not far from the spot where the battered body of Rachel Taylor, Penn State co-ed was found on March 28, signaling the first of the county's sex slayings this year.

The Grand Jury concluded its work Tuesday afternoon and in a report submitted to court, noted its action on the 25 bills presented to them during the two-day session. Of the bills, 11 were found true; 7 not true; 2 cases were continued; 2 were disposed of by pleas of guilty; 2 cases were settled and in one case the defendant is to undergo mental treatment.

Among the witnesses heard by the jury in the Millinder case were: Maude Rager and Ruth Robinson, of Mt. Eagle, who were with Faye Gates up until a few minutes before she met the person who beat her to death; Richard Wallace, of Milesburg, who discovered the slaying while returning home from spending the evening with Faye Gates' sister, Sheriff Edward R. Miller, the first official to reach the crime scene; William Gates, of Mt. Eagle, father of the victim, who identified his daughter's remains; Dr. J. W. Schwartz, of Bellefonte, one of the physicians present at the autopsy; Joseph Leathers, of Mt. Eagle, at whose home Millinder had spent the day and night immediately before the crime, and Pts. C. J. Hanna and William A. Miller, of the State Motor Police, who arrested Millinder, and to whom Millinder confessed the crime.

During the Grand Jury's consideration of the evidence, District Attorney Musser W. Gettig sent out for a folder of photographs supposedly showing the scene of the crime and the condition of the victim's body.

It is reported in Court House circles that when the regular September criminal court opens here on Monday, September 9, the Millinder case will be the first one to go on trial. Several days are expected to be taken up by the trial, and it is said that the prosecution alone will have approximately 24 witnesses.

There was no tag on the front fender.

The left rear fender of the car was damaged, and the front seat cover had been removed and stuffed under the rear seat. Police found an opened package of cheap tobacco and a small mouth organ in the car. Nearly 2 gallons of gasoline remained in the tank, which Mr. Harrison reported had been nearly half full when the car was taken.

Police, checking on the single plate found on the car, found the local records incomplete and are requesting information from Harrisburg in the hope the license may reveal a clue to the identity of the thief or thieves. Indications in the car, chiefly a large number of cigarette stubs and the mouth organ, lead police to the belief that boys or young men took the car for a joy ride.
