sketchy, said in effect: "I left the Leathers home at 12:25 a. m. May 5. Faye picked me up in her car. I got smart, but she would have nothing to do with me. There was a struggle in the car. I gagged her and hit her, turned the car and went home. My wife left me in. I tore Faye's underclothing while in the car. I don't know why I turned the car around, I was going to attack her but was afraid. The horn tooted a couple of times when I bumped the button. Another car was driving about 200 feet in front of Faye when she picked me up."

In the second statement, more lengthy, Millinder set forth in addition, that the struggle resulted in the car when Faye turned down his advances. He said she screamed but he gagged her with part of her braids. Faye stopped the car near the big locust tree, and he dragged her out and hit her on the head four or five times with a stone. She lost consciousness on the second blow, the confession states. Millinder said he had known Faye four years.
