truck was placed across a dead-end road along which the picketers' cars were parked and when the picketers came out the license numbers of their cars were taken and they were warned by the Sheriff against future violence. The Sheriff told them he had no objections to peaceful and lawful picketing.

Monday peace reigned at the mine although the picketers were still reporting for work. They sat outside the mine.

The dispute between Olenosky and the union first jumped into prominence last week when Olenosky brought charges of trespass against two union organizers. Charges were dismissed by the justice of the peace who heard the case.

Several days later the union brought charges against Olenosky. The union charged Olenosky with refusing to allow a check weighman to work on the tipple of the mine, Olenosky waived hearing after posting $300 bail.

Deputy Sheriff Hugg, stationed at Osceola Mills since the dispute broke out, said that a union organizer asked Olenosky if the check weighman would be allowed to go to work. When the answer was a flat "no," the union men sat down near the mine, he stated.

The United Mine Workers of America early this week took a step toward settling the labor dispute when it asked the National Relations Board at Washington to send a representative to this area to help iron out the trouble.

The local area representatives of the UMW of A contend that Olenosky has not complied with the agreement made by the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association and the United Mine Workers of America because Olenosky allegedly refuses to allow the check weighman, selected by the men at

Many New Houses

The demand for housing in Berwick is being met by the construction of 35 new homes. Some are being built and others have been completed. Some of these homes are single and others double houses. In addition, extensive remodeling is being placed over garages in several instances.

Health And Beauty

You Should Recognize Cancer Symptoms—Concluded

Many lives are sacrificed every year to cancer because people do not recognize the symptoms. If they did, timely surgery, radium or X-rays could usually cure them. Nothing but complete eradication will cure a cancer. There is no medicine known that has any effect upon it. Don't be foolish enough to waste time with remedies that are guaranteed to cure cancer. If you find that you have any of the symptoms go to the very best physician that you know.

Cancers are like bad habits, the drink habit for example. The first drink seems so simple, so innocent. You may think that it will end there, but it won't. It will grow and grow until your will is too weak to resist it. Then alcohol is your master, and it overcomes you.

This cancer at first, can be extirpated. It is localized. If left alone it is soon carried to various organs of the body. It is like an octopus. Its tentacles reach out in every direction, grasps its victims and crushes them to death by slow torture.

Sometimes a woman finds a little lump in her breast, or she notices a discharge. Instead of going immediately to her physician for an examination, she keeps putting it off. Meantime she may confide in some friend who misleads her into trying quack remedies. If the condition advances she may seek medical aid too late. Thus thousands of valuable lives are sacrificed every year upon the altar of timidity, fear and ignorance.

Cancer is not contagious, and in no sense is it disgraceful. If you have it, there is nothing to be ashamed of. Lumps in the breast are often harmless, but they should be looked after by a competent physician.

One who suddenly develops indigestion, especially if middle-aged or beyond, should have his stomach examined. It may be simple indigestion, or it may be of a more serious nature. Constant bleeding from the rectum is usually due to hemorrhoids but it might mean a malignant growth.

Ulcers in and about the mouth and throat should be regarded as serious if they cannot be quickly healed.

Some moles or persistent sores on the skin should be taken off. Don't get frightened about them. A little electricity properly applied will remove the moles and likewise cure skin cancers. Just here let me warn you against quacks. Some members of this tribe flourish by preying on the credulity of the public. They often apply caustic pastes until the patient is beyond help.

Do not live in constant fear that you will have a cancer. Avoid a diet that is full of fiery condiments. They keep your digestive apparatus constantly irritated. The steady drinker does the same thing to his system with alcohol. A man who smokes continuously may inflame his mouth and throat. Cancer of the throat or tongue is not uncommon among smokers.

The best that one can do to ward off cancer, is to eat moderately of wholesome foods, take some exercise every day, sleep eight hours at night and avoid worry, for it interferes with the functions of the body. Worry induces ulcers of the stomach, and might cause cancer.

CADET OFFICERS TO BE INCREASED

The number of juniors and seniors who may take the advanced course in the Reserve Officers Training Corps at the Pennsylvania State College has been raised from 150 to 200 this fall, by authority of the War Department. Last year the quota had been increased from 105 to 150.

Advanced students serve as cadet officers for freshmen and sophomores, who are required to take the basic R. O. T. C. course. Upon graduation, these advanced students receive commissions as second lieutenants in the reserve corps of the U. S. Army.

Boiled Rice

Wash the rice in cold water several times. Have ready boiling water—3 times as much water as rice, adding 1 teaspoon salt for every quart of water. Add the rice to the water slowly, taking care not to let the water stop boiling. Let cook undisturbed for 25 minutes or until the rice is tender. When done empty the rice in a colander and pour hot water through it until the grains separate. Drain, place the colander in a saucepan, let stand on back of stove 10 minutes.

Ironing Handkerchiefs

A handkerchief can be ironed more easily if the middle is ironed first and then the edges. Sometimes the middle will bulge if the edges are ironed first, and then the handkerchief can not be folded in good shape.

INSPECT FIRST "IDEAL TENDERAY BEEF"

S. S. Jensen, right, general manager of the meat plant of Shaffer Stores company in Tyrone, Pennsylvania, knows meats from "A" to "Z," having dealt in it for many years. He knows that the beef to which he is pointing is tender—guaranteed to be so. Mr. Jensen points out the quality of the beef to J. C. Calhoun, left, vice president and sales manager of the Shaffer Stores company. The photo was taken in the new Tenderay Process room just installed in the Shaffer Meat Plant in Tyrone. Beef is held in this room 72 hours at a controlled temperature of 50 degrees, Fahrenheit, and a controlled relative humidity of 90 per cent. During this time, the ultraviolet lamps on the ceiling prevent the growth of bacteria, preventing spoilage of the meat. The high temperature causes speeding up of the natural chemical reactions in meat which break down tough tissues, thus bring about tenderizing. Developed and patented by Westinghouse, the new process uniformly tenderizes all cuts of beef in three days.

Undines Purchase Pumper, Squad Car

alarms without exposing themselves to all kinds of weather—a particularly hard hardship on out-of-town alarms. Undine officers explained that two trucks were purchased to get away from the present objectionable and dangerous practice of having firemen ride to and from fires hanging to the sides of the pumper. The new squad truck, seating 8 men inside and a number of others atop the hose compartment, will enable an average crew of fire fighters to travel to and from fires in safety and some comfort.

Both machines will be streamlined and will present a most attractive appearance. There is a possibility that the traditional Undine colors, blue and white, may be reverted in the painting of the new trucks. Up to this time blue has been the predominating color in Undine history, and white has been used for trimming. The new trucks may be white, with blue trimmings. It is reported, although this feature has not been decided definitely at this time.

Company officials report that with the modern new aluminum ladders recently provided for the Mack quadruple combination truck, and the two new pieces of apparatus, the Undines will be in better position than ever to provide Bellefonte with the best possible fire-fighting service.

School Bonds Meet Approval

tests have been lodged against the suggested "last hope" for a new building here, and local school directors are optimistic as to the final outcome. The plan, briefly, is to organize a holding company which would issue and sell the bonds, add the $200,000 to the school district's fund of $165,000, and build a $365,000 building. The corporation would lease the building to the district for an annual rental which over a period of years would liquidate the bond issue. At that time the building would become the sole property of the school district.

It is expected that the Philadelphia investment bankers who have been retained by the board to sell the bonds will begin preliminary canvassing next week throughout Bellefonte and the districts sending pupils to the local schools.

the trade, he said. Since he will have accommodations for only about 30 students, he is now going over the qualifications of each one in choosing the class.

Swarz said classes will not begin until he has received certain information and permits from the Department of Labor and Industry. This data is expected daily and classes will begin early in October. It is hoped that the school will be held every Monday and Thursday night, and instruction will include theory as well as practical work in the use of micrometers, lathes, shapers, milling machines, drills, and other shop machinery, and in acetylene and electric welding.

Eight Burglaries

Eight Benton business places were visited Thursday night by burglars, who secured large quantities of cigarettes. Entrance was made through cellar windows, rear windows or doors that were jammed open. A car is believed to have been used to carry away the loot.
