Rips Door Off Cell
In spite of the fact that he tore a door off his cell in the jail at Sayre and started a bonfire in the jail corridor, Mike Morozky, of Buffalo, failed in his planned escape. When night patrolman Ray Eldred saw the flames he got into quick action, subduing the prisoner with a left hook on the jaw, and extinguishing the fire.

In a democracy there must be argument and discussion and disagreement as to what and how and when a thing is to be done.

The idea that only the young should go to school is erroneous; many adults would find it profitable to continue their studies.

RANDOM NOTES

It's just a build-up, Willie has some of the best press agents in the county patching him up to Presidential stature. And of the total circulation of all newspapers in the United States you must remember that less than 14 per cent of that circulation represents papers favorable to the Democratic cause. Fifteen states in the Union have no Roosevelt newspapers, and an overwhelming preponderance of Republican newspapers, it is no wonder that Willie gets plenty of space. But according to the various polls, including the uncannily accurate Gallup poll, Roosevelt, beginning with a substantial lead, is adding to that lead steadily.

HE DROPPED:

When Mr. Willie, the gentleman from Indiana, was nominated for the Presidency at Philadelphia, he believed the Republicans had a real chance. He looked strong, had an excellent sense of organization. Since then he has changed, in our estimation. His brass statements which later have to be corrected or explained by his henchmen, caused our confidence in him to do a tail-spin. Any man in public life who sticks to his words to the last ditch has no business in the President's office particularly at a time when the ill chosen word may plunge the nation into war. The United States has had some unfortunate experiences with tin horns in the past. How the Hittlers, Mussolinis, Stalins and the rest of the gutter-thirsty crowd in Europe would gloat if we should have in the President's chair a man whose stand in important matters changed from day to day. Now, as never before, the United States must present a strong and united front to all nations. To do it, we need a man at the head of the government who plots his course and sticks to it. President Roosevelt has demonstrated his ability to do just that.

Accident Victim Dies in Hospital

The family was returning from a vacation spent in Tiffin, Ohio, when their car left the road and ran headlong into the headwall about 1:10 p. m. Because traffic was light and the weather was fair, it was believed that Mr. Tayman fell asleep at the wheel a moment before the crash.

Propose Four County Airports

Local airports included in the program are: Black Moshannon $100,500; Bellefonte, $294,000; State College, $354,000 and Snow Shoe $62,000.

The Bellefonte field was proposed by the civil aeronautics administration for reasons other than expressly national defense, it was learned. Several other airports, none of them in the county, were included in this list.

The program for Pennsylvania covers 152 airports and includes preparation of land, paving, lighting radio facilities and miscellaneous items. There is no provision for federal payment to acquire land either for new airports or for expansion of existing fields.

There is no indication in the program given to the house committee which of the airport projects would be undertaken first if the money were made available, or the nature of the order of priority. However, 22 fields rate a "national defense" designation in addition to some other justifications, such as air-carrier site, civil pilot training school, intermediate field, or simply "civil aviation."

Strip Brass From Cars
More than 1500 pounds of brass were stripped from bearings of railroad cars stored for emergency use at the sidings at Boynton and the Osceola Mills Brick yard. The theft required hard work, since the car must be blocked and the truck jacked before the bearings can be removed.

There may be better buys in the world, but we don't know of anything as much of a bargain as the average newspaper.

Draft May Be Permanent

Charles H. Grahl, pointed out: "Such a minimum would permit most boys to serve their year in training without disrupting plans for their life ahead. I believe it should be done."

Meanwhile, it was learned that a plan for a permanent system of universal training will be prepared on Capitol Hill.

The state adjutants came to Washington to receive final and detailed instructions on carrying out registrations of all men between the ages of 21 and 35 inclusive on Oct. 16. All of them assured national officials that registration would be carried out without a hitch. Most reported that the election plan for the states would be used. South Carolina, however, planned to use its educational plan.

Regardless of how good you are, or how excellent your business is, success is possible only if you use wise selling methods.

Sugar Valley's Soldiers

as if the British were to shoot down Herman Goering and make him into a show throughout the Midlands.

If it had not been for Jake's publicity value to the Confederates, he would have been shot after a brief drum-head court-martial, as his war guilt was unmistakable, but the postponement of the trial caused a lessening of resentment. He was not freed, however, and allowed to return home until after Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

Surely copies of the Jake Zimmerman ballad are extant in Clinton County and if brought to light should be published in this newspaper.

Jake's wounded hand, never diseased, became infected and would not heal. When he went about butchering and soiling his always kept, it wrapped in a foul rag. Yet he was always very sensitive about it.

Professional Wolf Killer

On his return to Sugar Valley, Jake Karstetter divided his time between butchering and as a professional wolf hunter.

Sometime his expeditions to rid localities of killer wolves took him as far distant as the state capital. In 1897 he visited Lebanon County to wipe out some wolves that had appeared in the Little Mountain, back of the famous James Lick estate. "Pedlar's Lot" and were worrying the young cattle and sheep. Though the wolves left about the time Jake arrived, he made a favorable impression on Col. John H. Lick, the son of the donor of the "Pedlar's Lot" and was worrying the young cattle and sheep. Though the wolves left about the time Jake arrived, he made a favorable impression on Col. John H. Lick, the son of the donor of the "Pedlar's Lot" and was worrying the young cattle and sheep.

Among the earliest settlers of Sugar Valley were several Revolutionary soldiers and sons of veterans of the Colonial wars. While Major Henry Wolford, who put up the first tannery in the valley had served in the War of 1812.

There was an almost universal response from the young men of Sugar Valley to serve in the war with Mexico and one of the last veterans of that war to survive was "Uncle Billy" Smartwood, who lived on to about 1907.

In the Civil War, Sugar Valley boys covered themselves with glory. One of the earliest to enlist, was Major Henry Wolford, who put up the first tannery in the valley had served in the War of 1812.

There was an almost universal response from the young men of Sugar Valley to serve in the war with Mexico and one of the last veterans of that war to survive was "Uncle Billy" Smartwood, who lived on to about 1907.

Active in Reserve Militia

In addition to volunteers and draftees, a company of the Pennsylvania Reserve Militia was organized in Logan on May, 1917, being drilled by First Lieut. John H. Chatham, 3rd. Later, when the home guards were reorganized at Lock Haven under the captaincy of Senator R. S. Quigley, later Major P. R. M., a group of Sugar Valley boys journeyed regularly to Lock Haven to continue their training at the headquarters.

From all accounts, Sugar Valley has enthusiastically responded to the next draft, as befits true Americans, descendants of veterans of all our wars. Sugar Valley boys grow up among firearms and come of a race of hunters; they know how to shoot straight and with their Spartan home training make admirable soldiers.

Nor has the navy been forgotten in Sugar Valley. White pine masts for warships came from the valley for the Mexican transports, while yellow pine and oak gunboat timber were sent out for the war between the states and Sugar Valley boys served with Farragut.

An interesting and generally overlooked feature of military training in Sugar Valley were the battalions which existed in the valley before the Mexican War. Every male between the ages of 12 to 45 years was required to take training.

In this organization, which was the forerunner of the present Pennsylvania National Guard, the Sugar Valley soldiers were held in high esteem. In this old Pennsylvania Militia of pre-Civil War days, Sugar Valley patriotism and desire for preparedness is attested by the allotting of a complete division to the valley with headquarters at Logan. The commander being Maj. Gen. D. K. Heckman, who died in 1902.

It is worth remembering, too, that one of the most interesting young Sugar Valley heroes of the late World War, "Mickey" Jameson, honored by being assigned to the exclusive First City Troop of Philadelphia, is a grandson of the illustrious General Heckman.

Old "Muster Days"
The training or "muster days" took place in the vast open fields back of the general's sugar bush, a mile west of Logan, and the camps were erected and tents pitched under the giant sugar maples; general headquarters being in General Heckman's spacious and imposing mansion. The officers' mounts held special stalls in his gigantic barn.

There was an intense rivalry between General Heckman's division and the division commanded by that dashing young playboy, Maj. Gen. "Uncle" Wolfe, of Wolfe's Store in Brush Valley, Centre County. Once in the presence of former Adjt. Gen. Simon Cameron, a mighty muster of the two divisions was held on General Heck-man's estate, which the old folks still talk about.

A feature was the presence of General Wolfe's troop of girl "cavalrymen" who rode Amazon-style in sunbonnets and calico, with high boots, and were dandied on a wild gallop at moving targets.

Cypress barkers and fakers of all kinds thronged the grove and everybody able to be present from Sugar Valley and Brush Valley and all over Clinton and Centre Counties was there, some coming in covered wagons, ox carts, horse-back, and on foot, according to "Grandma" Ann Mary Starbeck, of Sugar Valley, then of Wolfe's Store. "Grandma," then a slim dandied girl, was on hand for the three-day evolutions and jollifications, and says that a great time was had by all.

The banquet in honor of General Cameron in the Heckman home, steered was a great event. "Old Simon" was a great Democrat in those days and only Pennsylvania Dutch toasts were given. General Cameron's mother having been Martha Pfoutz, of Pfoutz's Valley Perry County.

Tales of Playboy Wolfe

Many anecdotes were told of Playboy Wolfe, whose father was a wealthy miller and storekeeper. Once, as a prank, he rode his charger through the woods to the attic of the General Philip Benner home at Rock, Centre County, during a muster. The mettlesome four-year-old refused to descend and it had to be roped and lowered from a garret window, which was doubled in size for the purpose.

On an occasion when Adjt. Gen. Adam Diller, a great scikler for the properties, was on hand to take the review, General Wolfe appeared in a brand new uniform, gorgeous beyond regulations, imported from Germany. The general's Negro body-servant in the rush and excitement had forgotten to remove the Centre County seal on the brass buttons, and no one dared say a word as, with lordly tread "Uncle" marched out with the adjutant general, the synouure of all eyes on the huge field.

There was a rather loud titter when a group of Sugar Valley militiamen who had tramped across the mountains to "compare notes." Sugar Valley's military history rests soundly on seven American wars; endless will be her glory in martial days to come.

The committee states present indications are that the number of farmers earning payments under the 1940 Program will exceed the more than 70,000 State farmers who earned payments in 1939.

The county Agricultural Conservation Committee, whose office is located at the Postoffice building, urges all farmers who may have any questions to ask regarding their participation in the program to get in touch with the county office promptly.
