labor; a 50 per cent reduction in unemployment; the C. C. C.; the H. O. L. C.; slum clearance and housing; cheaper electricity; soil conservation; reorganization of utilities; doubling the number and increasing the effectiveness of naval bases; good neighbor policy to Latin and South America; joint defense plan with Canada; conscription to and south American joint defense strength; and many other measures.

"What Roosevelt has done," Dr. White said, "is to give the Government of the United States back to the people instead of to the bankers."

He cited as the great need of the modern world a few old-fashioned concepts of life, namely: a return to honesty; a renewal of persistence on the part of those who are too ready to give up the battle of life; a willingness to work, and a greater respect and support of the church.

"I am impressed with one quality of Mr. Willkie the Republican candidate for President," Dr. White said. He wants a job worse than any man I ever knew before."

Henry A. Brockerhoff, of Bellefonte, treasurer of the State Democratic Committee, presided at the meeting. Group singing was led by Cecil A. Walker, of Bellefonte, and at the conclusion of the speaking program the pavilion was cleared of chairs for round and square dancing.

John W. Decker, of Spring Mills, candidate for the General Assembly from Centre County, pledged that if elected on November 5 he will be guided by the following program: support of farm legislation for better control of Bangs Disease and T. B. in cattle; extension of the soil conservation laws; revision of the old age assistance laws to make it unnecessary for aged persons to sign away small homes before they can receive assistance; better game and fish laws, and no increase in the hunting and fishing license fees; a Constitutional amendment for absentee voters in Pennsylvania; a graduated income tax, and more and better rural roads.

Mr. Decker declared that he would consistently oppose any sales tax, any tax on salaries or pay envelopes and any transfer of funds designated for local communities, by the state.

William M. Aukerman, of Altoona, candidate for Congress from the 23rd District, declared that the issues of the present campaign are clearly defined. One party represents the 75 years of faithful performance, while the other party represents a group which for many years has traded in misrule and broken promises. President Roosevelt should be returned to the White House because he has a thorough knowledge of national and international affairs, Aukerman said.

The speaker added that the present Congressman, who is seeking re-election, has consistently voted in the interests of the utilities and vested interests, in opposition to the principles of the Roosevelt administration, and the best interests of the majority of the residents of this district.

Mrs. Catherine Fiohr, president of the Federation of Democratic Women, declared the woman of the nation, now celebrating its 20th anniversary of their obtaining the right to vote, must fight to maintain the accomplishments women voters have helped to bring in the past two decades.

"Wendell Willkie has endorsed all the major actions of the New Deal," Mrs. Fiohr said. "The only real issue of the campaign is the third term. What does one man have three, five or ten terms as President, so long as his candidacy is a true expression of the will of the people?" Mrs. Fiohr asked.

"The people of the United States have long been tradition breakers—it's their saving grace," the speaker pointed out. "If we had been content with England's traditional rule over the original colonies, there wouldn't be any United States today. Slavery for many years was a tradition in this nation—and we fought the Civil War to get rid of it," Mrs. Fiohr said.

"Up until 20 years ago, it was a national tradition that women had no right to vote," the speaker added. "We changed that and it is tradition no longer."

"The third term tradition has no basis in law or in the Constitution. If this nation is to go forward, its people must continue to break any traditions which form an obstacle to progress or to the best interests of the people," Mrs. Fiohr concluded.

Mrs. Bickert, of Philadelphia, State Democratic Vice Chairman, urged over the election of President Roosevelt and of Senator Joseph Guffey over his Republican opponent Jay Cooke. Since 1881, the speaker said, Philadelphia has been under Republican rule. It is a city facing bankruptcy, even though taxed to the hilt. Misrule, waste, and political lords and vassals blind to the ruin that faces the city, could make their fall tell, she said. The leader of the Republican party, and sub-rosa leader of the Philadelphia Republican organization is Jay Cooke, now a candidate for the U. S. Senate, who sponsored and who otherwise is partly responsible for the city's plight.

"The Republican leaders," the speaker declared, "have nothing to offer us but chaos, bread lines, soup lines, closed banks, youths in jail and hopelessness. Compare that with the indispensable gains made by the Roosevelt administration."

Stanley Granger, a United States District Attorney located in Pittsburgh, scored the dishonest and mud-slinging campaign being conducted by Republican leaders. He cited specifically the billboards reading: "Roosevelt Means War," and "Dictators Hate Churches, Save Your Church, Vote Straight Republic."

lean" which were posted in various places last week. He said that the Presidential campaign now under way is similar to the gubernatorial campaign in Pennsylvania's two years ago when the same high pressure methods, the same belly-ache were used to put Gov. Arthur James in office.

"The people of Pennsylvania cannot be fooled twice by such tactics," Granger said.

Inroads on the audience during the meeting were: Miss Maude Miller, of Ferguson township, Centre County Democratic vice chairman; Mrs. Lucy B. Merrell, of Phillipsburg; Mrs. Jean Grove, of State College. Regional Director of the Federated Democratic Clubs in this section, and others.

of $50 for the use of the county, to abstain from the use of any narcotics, and to obey all the laws of the commonwealth.

The court placed, Francis Gintman, 24, on probation for a year, after he pleaded guilty to a four-year-old charge of breaking and entering and larceny. Since another person, Delmar Kelly, was involved, he was ordered to pay one-half the costs and to restore one-half the stolen property, valued at $20, to William L. Schadt, whose gas station was robbed of a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and candy. The court stated it was convinced of the young man's honesty and trustworthiness since the incident, that he is employed steadily and is meeting all obligations to his family and society.

Mrs. Marie Culver Bachman and Miss Myrtle Enloe, of Williamsport, in the Clinton county jail, since their arrest August 10 on shoplifting charges, were placed on parole for one year under Mrs. Nan Lohman, assistant probation officer, after it was presented to the court that they have been of good behavior, have returned the stolen goods to the several local stores, paid part of the costs and made arrangements to pay the rest.

In granting parole, after they had served a little more than a third of the original six months sentence, the court pointed out, that this business of shoplifting is a bad thing and that if the two young women should ever get into similar trouble again, their record would make a jail sentence mandatory.

STOVES - THEN AND NOW

It's a long jump from the fancy heating apparatus of the year 1500 to the simple, streamlined electric ranges of 1940. Between the two types of stoves lie four centuries of difference.

And what differences they are!

The stove that graced the room of the 16th century householder in Switzerland or Germany was a tall, porcelain enameled structure, generally shaped like the castles on the Rhine, ornately decorated with Biblical and mythological scenes. In addition, leaves, flowers, fruit, and grotesque little figures painted in blue, green, yellow, and brown, on the white, gleaming background formed a colorful border.

Despite the profuse decorations the stove was of distinct practical value for it usually had steps along the side where the family gathered to keep warm. The top step, the place of honor, was occupied by the oldest person, usually the grandfather. In the rear was a broad flat surface where chilly members slept at night.

Strange as it seems after 400 years, even though the style of stoves has changed materially, the finish remains the same—porcelain enamel—a permanent finish—so smooth and easy to clean.

Today's smart electric ranges are a result of step-by-step changes in construction and design from the early models at the turn of the century.

These sleek beauties give instant heat without flame at a turn of a switch—"measured" heat that makes cooking accurate. The 1940 ranges are equipped with timers to relieve the housewife of pot-watching, and with lights to illuminate the range surface. Ovens are roomier than ever—some models being available with double ovens and warming compartments. The range cooking platform is built on a level with the surrounding cabinet counters, giving a smooth, unbroken working surface. While electric ranges are more attractive and efficient than ever, they have been consistently reduced in price. The 1940 ranges, for instance, are a far better value for the money than those of only ten years ago. Operating costs have steadily reduced, too, until electric heat for cooking is one of the minor items in the household budget.

Salvation Army Seeks Funds Here

The first duty of the committee is sponsoring the 1940 annual appeal in this area to raise funds for The Salvation Army. Within the next few days, several hundred letters will be mailed by this committee to a selected list of prospective givers bringing before them the work of the Salvation Army and requesting that donors be mailed in to the treasurer of their area.

Mr. W. W. Kerlin, chairman of the South Centre Committee stated today: "The Salvation Army is not alone concerned with the improvement of the poor in large cities, but vitally concerned in the needs of smaller towns and communities in which circumstances arise and help can be given. The newly organized South Centre Salvation Army Committee desires to bring to our community the facilities and services the Salvation Army is able to provide and for no other purpose than that our needy citizens shall enjoy the same to make their problem a little easier to bear. I believe in the Salvation Army and the present campaign will have my financial support."

Groups of employees which have been organized and will contribute as units are as follows: Millheim Hosiery Mill, W. C. Gramley and R. W. Thompson captains; East Penn's Valley High school, captain James Neidigh; First National Bank and Trust Company, captain S. W. Gramley; all of Millheim, Groce Silk Mill of Spring Mills, captain J. C.
