Answers to Modern Etiquette

- 1. Listen attentively. One may also ask an occasional question to show interest. Do not try to convince the others that you are well informed, nor try to change the subject.
2. No. This gives the appearance that the one who makes the suggestion is bored.
3. Yes. One or the other must make the first gesture towards friendship.
4. No the bride's family, or the bride herself, should do so.
5. The host should be seated at one end of the table, the woman guest of honor at his right.
6. Yes, so that he may assist her. But the woman should precede the man when entering.
7. Yes. In the upper right corner one may write—1015 Vine Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
8. The knife should be placed diagonally across the rim of the plate.
9. No; this becomes very tiresome to everybody but the wife.
10. This depends upon how early in the evening refreshments are served, but probably about thirty minutes after finishing is the usual time to leave. A guest at any affair should never "eat and run."
11. If the man has but one arm, if he is rheumatic, or if he is about 85 years of age, it would be excusable. Otherwise, not.
12. No; this is not customary.

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

The cranberry is a versatile fruit lending its delicious flavor to a variety of dishes. They are a good source of vitamins; they also contain vitamin A, iodine and mineral salts.

Cranberry Beef Roast
Select a piece of beef from top of the round. Wipe carefully, sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Brown in melted fat. Cook cranberries in enough water to cover until very soft. Rub through a sieve and sweeten slightly. If very thick, add enough water to make a thin puree. Use 1 quart of puree to 3 pounds of meat. Pour puree over the meat, cover and cook slowly until meat is tender. If necessary, add a little water during cooking. Serve the cranberry sauce with the meat instead of gravy. French fried potatoes are good with this dish.

Cranberry Pudding

1/2 cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 cup butter

Cranberry Pie
1 1/2 cups dried apricots
4 cups cranberries
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter

PROTECT BEES FROM DANGERS OF WINTER
Winter time is vacation time for the bees, but they do not go anywhere. In fact, they prefer not to be disturbed as they take time off from their work.
County Agent R. C. Blaney says that the bees should be packed by the middle of November so that it will not be necessary to disturb them during cold weather. Any disturbances during the winter causes them to break up the cluster and reduces the possibility of successful wintering.
A number of details are included in the special care necessary at this time to prevent heavy winter losses. Following is a list of these important items:
Wind protection, either natural or artificial, must be provided. A board fence or a fence of cornstalks will be a satisfactory protection.
It is essential to have a dry location where the bees will get plenty of sunshine and have good air drainage.
Some absorbent will be needed to take excess moisture away from the brood chamber.
Packing will be required for bees located in the northern half or two-thirds of the state, for bees in higher altitudes, and for those in exposed locations.
Plenty of food of good quality for winter and early spring is another necessity.
Instructions for making a packing case are given in Circular 141, entitled "Beekeeping in Pennsylvania," which may be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Office in Bellefonte.

WOMEN OF THE MOOSE OBSERVE ALUMNI NIGHT
The Bellefonte Women of the Moose Alumni Chapter, Night was observed Wednesday, October 30, at the Moose home.
The meeting opened with the introduction of the following guests: Mrs. Freda Clinger, Grand Dean of Academy of Friendship; Miss Nellie J. Ryan, Associate Regent of College of Regents; Mrs. Hazel Hummel, Grand Pianist; Mrs. Grace Haupt, Associate Dean of Academy of Friendship; Mrs. Anna B. Roland, of Altoona, who gave readings; and James R. Hughes, Headmaster of former Bellefonte Academy, who was guest speaker of the evening.
In his speech Mr. Hughes emphasized the life of James J. Davis, Pilgrim Governor of the Moose, Mr. Davis, a Welshman, came from Wales to America at the age of 8. At the age of 17 he began work as an apprentice in a steel mill where his father worked, and after years of hard work became a pudler. From there he worked himself up to the Senate of the United States.
In 1906 Mr. Davis attended a lodge meeting, after which he expressed his desire to help the aged, widows and children. In 1913 his dream materialized when he founded Mooseheart, the most famous child's city of the world. In this home all types of trades are taught to the boys and girls. The school started with only eleven children and there are today about 1200 students.
Grace Haupt, Associate Dean, gave a welcome to all the guests and members present.
Entertainment included songs by Mrs. Hazel Hummel and Miss Nellie Ryan.
Miss Ryan gave a talk on Alumni work. She said the association is for the graduates of Mooseheart who wish to further their education. She also complimented Mrs. Martin on the splendid work she has accomplished in the past year. Mr. Martin also sang "Mother MacCreary."

Davis, founder of Mooseheart; presentation of gifts brought in a basket by Beverly J. Oeler and Elizabeth J. Martin, granddaughters of Mr. Martin. They also sang "I Am An American."

The meeting was then closed and a tureen social was held. The Banquet was played during this time.
The Banqueters were: Mr. V. H. Fifer, Thyls Sprankle, Virginia Tornell, Virginia Holt, Teresa Entekin, and Lester and Earl Reese.

THE WASTE OF EXPERIENCE (Concluded)
It is stated by Joe Fort Newton even think of calling to the pastorate a man of forty five, superbly fitted by gift and experience to take a difficult down town central parish.

The Bible says, "Old men for council, young men for war." That is a tribute to judgment and experience. Alas that youth has become a pawn in the hands of the dictators. May God in his wisdom stop this wastage of life by wars, and the stupid practices in business that pushes useful men aside to eat their hearts out in idleness. In order to employ younger men not so well fitted for the tasks as those whom they have displaced.

What is the use of science to prolong life if people are relegated to a useless existence? Idleness only breeds laziness and discontent. Some of the old masters painted some of their immortal masterpieces after they were eighty. Many of the greatest books have been written by authors well over their three score years and to their credit.

Some day, maybe, men will go back and learn the great lesson of life over again, and when they do, they'll find out that an economy that restricts the efforts of men, curtails their activities, discourages hard work and full time production is a false economy.

CLEAN CHIMNEYS TO HELP PREVENT FIRES
Flaked-off soot often becomes the flying embers that set fires when the heating plant is stoked heavily during the cold winter days. Cleaning the chimney will reduce this danger, reminds County Agent R. C. Blaney. A clean chimney has more draft.
Brushes for cleaning the chimney can be made from pine branches with long ropes attached at each end. The brush is started at the top of the chimney with the branch ends down and pulled up and down with the ropes.
Even with a clean chimney there is danger from flying embers when any part of the building or of those nearby are covered with weathered wood shingles. This is particularly true when wood is used as fuel. One way to eliminate this danger is to resurface the roof with a fire-resistant material. Another method is to equip the chimney with a cage-like arrangement known as a spark arrester.
A spark arrester can be made easily from galvanized mesh hardware cloth having half-inch openings. Instructions for building the spark arrester can be obtained from the Agricultural Extension Office in Bellefonte.
