Thanksgiving

The year 1940—a year of great crisis, of sober, even terrifying thoughts for people all over the world, a year of humanity's greatest struggle for preservation—brings in a Thanksgiving which for the American people has never been more symbolic in its imperishable image for free men.

When the Pilgrims stepped forth on Plymouth Rock, they carved not merely a new nation, but a new realization, America has many traditions, many precious heritages. But none has the spiritual value, the immense humility, the scope of reverence, inherent in Thanksgiving Day.

With intolerance and bigotry ravaging men's souls and forcing an exodus of peoples from their homes, such as the world has never witnessed before, it is with a sense of complete, of humble pride, that we realize how indelible are the foundations of American life.

Thanksgiving Day reflects—in the travails and successes of our Pilgrim Fathers, one of these indelible formulas of America—the inalienable right to freedom of worship.

Yes, we have a right to be thankful. We have a duty, too—that our thankfulness be embodied in our determination to preserve those ideals which gave us Thanksgiving Day.

Today, more than ever in our nation's history, the bounty of American fields and farms, the productivity and skill of American machines and factories, the resources and creativeness for human welfare of American men and women, is our greatest weapon for the continuation and preservation of the American life—and the true destiny of Thanksgiving Day in America.

No people have more reason to be thankful.

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa My young sister has graduated from high school and is very anxious to go to college, as she wishes to become a teacher. Now my problem is this.

I am engaged to a young man and we had planned to be married this year, but if I do that I will have to give up my teaching job, as married women are not employed in our schools as teachers. My husband's salary is very ample for two to live on but will not allow for sending a girl to college.

Now my sister is very smart and deserves a college education, but I do not think it will be treating my young man right to make him wait for a home of his own for four years. I think he is awfully tired of living in a boarding house and would be terribly disappointed for me to put our wedding off.

What would you do under the circumstances? ELLA B.—Okla.

ANSWER I do not think I would put my wedding off—certainly not for four years—to send my sister to college. If the young man is agreeable, you might delay it for a year in order to get her started. Almost any young woman, nowadays, who is smart and willing to work, can find a way to finish college if she can get a year's start. Nearly every college has scholarships and funds of different kinds that are available to girls or boys who have shown ability in their college work the first year.

So often older girls give up years of their lives to educate their younger brothers and sisters, and oftentimes they are well repaid. But at other times they find that the men who wanted to marry them, refuse to wait and they see them marry other girls who do not put them off.

A sour note is sometimes introduced also when the younger child they have sacrificed so much for, fails in life just as she finishes college and despite her financial obligations, gets married immediately.

Perhaps you might solve your problem by getting the principal of your school to give you substitute work. This very often pays well and there is usually no mention made whereby substitute teachers have to be single. Or you might possibly get a part-time job doing something else besides teaching. I do hope you can work your problem out so that your sister can get her college education, while you and your finance can get your home.

LOUISA.

Dear Louisa There is a very poor family that lives near me and I have been helping them a lot but they have reached the place where they seem to think it is my duty to support them. I am really not able to help them, as much as I do, and I am getting very much disgusted with their attitude.

B. L. D.—Alabama.

ANSWER It is always better to let people pay a little something for what they get or do a little work for it, rather than give things outright—that is, of course, unless they are in desperate circumstances and need things right away and are unable to work. In that way you save their self respect and keep their morale up. That is why a work program is so much better for unemployed people than a dole would be. If you have a community chest or a Salvation Army in your town, why not report this family to them? They will investigate them and see if they are really deserving of aid. In case you have no such agencies where you live, require the family to do some work for what you give them.

LOUISA.

Takes Sign Literally While on patrol duty on the Lincoln Highway Thursday a State Motor Policeman from the Gettysburg sub-station saw a car go by with a green sticker on the back window which read: "See You Later." The police have issued repeated warnings against the use of stickers. The policeman overtook the car and ordered the driver to remove the sticker. Then the policeman went to the office of a Justice of the Peace and filed an information against the motorist who will be given the usual ten days to pay the fine and costs.

THE OFFICE CAT "A Little Nonsense Now and Then, Is Relished by the Wisest Men"

Happy Thanksgiving Well, folks, let's be thankful we'll soon be through with the battle of the Turkey Days. Last week some of us observed what we thought was Thanksgiving. This Thursday we'll celebrate what others term Cranksgiving. Meanwhile, let's hope that Keystone State may rejoin the Union before this time next year.

Our Poet's Column The morning after the night before Our cat came back at the hour of four; The innocent look in her face had went, But the smile on her face was a smile of content.

Legs! Legs! Legs! Legs to the right of us, Legs to the left of us, Legs in front of us. How they display them. On they go trippingly, Daintily and skippingly. Frost that bites nippingly Does not dismay them.

Straight legs and bandy ones, Bum legs and dandy ones, Awkward and handy ones, Flirt with the breezer, Round legs and dapper ones, Thin legs and fatter ones— Especially the latter ones— Showing their knees. Knock-kneed and bony ones, Real legs and phony ones, Silk covered tony ones, Second to none. Starlight and distorted ones, Mates and ill-sorted ones, Home and imported ones— Ain't we got fun?

The Kick-Off Two Scotchmen were watching a football game; one had a bottle, the other only a thirst. The fellow with the bottle was talking very largely about his knowledge of the game and what a fine player he was himself.

During the conversation he helped himself very liberally to the contents of his bottle, whereupon the thirsty one said: "Well, I notice you're a fine tacker, but you're no good at passing."

Women Are Like This 1—A book—always bound to please. 2—An auto—need chocking every so often. 3—A train—often get on the wrong track. 4—A stove—often need a new lid. 5—A chair—often need to be sat on. 6—A fire—often flare up and go out. 7—A callus—it takes hard work to get, it hurts when you have it, but you sort of miss it when it's gone.

A Stranger Himself The quack was selling an elixir which he declared would make men live to a great age. "Look at me," he shouted, "Hale and hearty, and I'm over 300 years old!" "Is he really an old as that?" asked a listener of the man's assistant. "I can't say," replied the assistant, "I've only worked for him 100 years."

At Last—That Word For It Inspecting a pair of trousers in his shop in Athens, a tailor queried—"Eurildes?" Answered the customer—"Eumenides? Yah!"

Weather Forecast Weather our weather be cold, Or whether our weather be hot, Or whether you like our weather Or whether you like it not, You'll just have to weather our weather, 'Cause it's all the weather we've got!

Likely to Stay Ephraim—"Did you know that Jonah was three days in the stomach of a whale?" Rastus—"Dat ain't much? Mah uncle Joe was longer dan dat in de stomach of an alligator." Ephraim—"Yo' don't say. How long?" Rastus—"He's dere, Ju'."

Poor Business Place A fellow had his check returned marked, "No funds." "Heckuva bank" was his retort, "not to have fifty dollars on hand."

See The Point? Boy—"While we're sitting in the moonlight, I'd like to ask you—" Girl—"Yes, dear?" Boy—"Couldn't we move over? I'm sitting on a nail."

A Bargain He—"I wish you would stop driving from the back seat." Wife—"I will when you quit cooking from the dining room table."

Stumped Him First Rookie—"I don't know how to fill out this question, sir." Second Rookie—"What is it?" First Rookie—"It says: Who was your mother before she was married? I didn't have any mother before she was married."

Couldn't Fool Him He was pickled and the cop found him at 2 a. m., clinging to a lamp post and shouting "Lemme in!" "There's nobody lives there," said the cop. "Don't lie," retorted the stow, pointing aloft. "There's a light upstairs!"

Returned The Compliment School Teacher (just before vacation)—"Now, children, I hope you will have a pleasant weekend and, what is more important, come back with a little more sense in your heads." Children (in chorus)—"Same to you, Miss."

Scrapple Minister—"Do you take this woman for butter or for wurst?" Groom—"Oh, liver alone, I never sausage nerve!"

Late War News It is officially reported that the Germans have taken Saltz near the Dutch frontier and rushed for the dikes. The British war office admits the Germans are evacuating all along the line and the strain on their rear is enormous. The enemy tried to suppress this but it leaked out. Germans now realize the value of a scrap of paper.

That's all, folks. You've probably heard of the young married woman who named her baby "Encore," because she wasn't on the program.
