Farm Home Is Razed By Fire
A century old and a well known landmark in that area, was owned by Boyd Spicher of Pleasant Gap. He carried some insurance. Virtually all of the family's furniture and clothing was destroyed and some of that loss is covered by insurance. Members of the family discovered the blaze after they had retired and when they found the stairway blocked by flames and smoke, they herded out on a roof over a porch. Mr. Lansberry lowered one of the sons to the ground, and the youth ran to the barn and got a ladder, down which Mrs. Lansberry handed the children to safety. It is believed the fire started in the kitchen and gutted most of the house before being discovered. Mr. Lansberry ran a considerable distance in his bare feet to telephone for aid. When firemen arrived the building was doomed. Firemen remained on duty until about 1:30 a. m. Infant Dies Stephen Rusnak, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Rusnak, of Ninth street, Philadelphia, died on Thursday morning, December 26, 1940, at the Philadelphia State Hospital. Funeral services were held Saturday morning.

mission system and its equipment provides a...ification for voice currents. Mr. Caum said that in the company district which includes this exchange area, 1941 construction costs will total $1,120,000, compared to $890,000 spent for construction during 1940. Bell construction activities were accelerated during the latter part of 1940, due largely to the national defense program. Present indications point to an even more rapid quickening of the pace of 1941 as Pennsylvania's great resources are tapped more and more for preparedness needs. Accordingly, the Bell company's 1941 construction program has been planned with a view to keeping telephone service at a high point of efficiency as continually greater demands are made upon its communication facilities. $5.12 a month covers the job.
