PROPOSE SALTY SENTENCE FOR FUTURE BOOTLEGGERS
A fine of $1,000 and a year in jail will be proposed for liquor bootleggers by the Pennsylvania Counties' Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, a vice president announced this week. Roy W. Koons, the association's Harrisburg representative, said the Legislature would be asked to stiffen the penalties for bootlegging, and deplored what he termed light sentences for those convicted of engaging in illicit liquor traffic. "These violators have no liquor license; no business interest to protect, and after a light sentence or small fine they return to their illegal operations," Koons said. "Many crimes resulting from such bootleg practices are blamed on the legitimate retail liquor business."

County Farmers Attend Meeting
The county farmers met at the home of Mrs. T. Zuber, Willard Hetter, and S. C. Yearick, from Spring Mills Community; H. A. Meyer, Harold N. Brungart, and Walter Hackman, from Rebersburg Community; Milton E. Stover, Paul Thompson, and Orvis Orndorf, from Millheim Community; Charles H. Confer, from Toward Community; E. T. Malcolm Musser, and John Dunkle representing the Bellefonte Community.

The conference took on special significance this year, the county committee stated, in view of the present world crisis, and much of the discussion centered around agriculture's contribution to national defense. In this connection, probably the outstanding feature of the conference, according to the committee, was a panel discussion of the subject, "What Are We Preparing to Defend?" Taking part in this discussion were representatives of business, banking, education, labor, agriculture, and government. These various viewpoints were presented by the following: R. L. Hulshiser, on labor; J. Rex Haver, education; George Diack, industry; John Zimmerman, business; Dwight Saylor, P. A. Decker, agriculture; Dr. Hendrickson, government, and Boyd Jordan, on banking.

The conference discussed the part the present farm program has played in helping the farmers and the country generally back to prosperity; the manner in which it has contributed to assisting the farmers of the Nation in cooperating to adjust agricultural production to definite needs; and the part that it probably will play in stabilizing agriculture during the present world crisis in helping to absorb the shocks that are certain to come after the present conflict.

Special emphasis was given to the importance of the Cotton Mattress Program sponsored by the Agricultural Administration to supply materials for making cotton mattresses to those rural families who need mattresses, yet who do not have the income with which to buy mattresses through regular commercial channels. District Agent Shelton R. Poole discussed this phase of the program.

Big Farm Show Draws Crowds

Blue Ribbons Dangle Proudly From Pens as Exhibit Enters 2nd Day
The first 1941 blue ribbons dangled proudly from a half hundred livestock pens Tuesday as Pennsylvania's ever-growing farm shows entered the second day of its silver anniversary.

And while the aristocrats of the farm yard—horses, cattle, swine and sheep—underwent last minute tailoring for today's appearance before the judges, outspoken praise of the quality of stock and the manner in which it was fitted for presentation echoed over the vast building.

P. C. Mackenzie, State College, a farm show veteran of 11 years in the main arena, declared the sheep show was the best this state had ever produced. Another State College judge, Robert Olmstead, was equally high in his praise of the dairy and beef cattle entries which he declared "far superior" to other years.

The governor arriving late returning by automobile from the inaugural ceremonies in Washington, declared: "Agriculture upon which the life of America depends, attained its progress and attained its position of supremacy through the freedom and liberty of thought and independent action in a democracy."

The governor was introduced by Secretary of Agriculture John H. Light, who described Pennsylvania farmers as "efficient food producers." He urged, however, better methods of marketing and distribution "to give the farmer more for his work and to make it easier for the people of the state and nation to purchase farm products."

Officials estimated that close to 100,000 persons spread out through the 14-acre building Tuesday in one of the largest opening day crowds in history. At stake for the 10,830 exhibitors is $42,918 in premiums, a record high for the show which had a humble beginning in 1917 with 440 entries competing for $735 prize money.

Opening day judging brought out grand champions in the sheep, Belgian breed of horses and dairy bull sections as well as prize winners in home economics, wool and other divisions. Officials planned to speed up the tempo in view of the increased entry lists.

Waldo Barrow, Slippery Rock; Warren North, Northampton, R. D. 2; the Buck and Doe Run Valley Farm, Coatesville; Rufus Patterson and Son, Waynesburg; J. R. Henderson, Hickory, Washington county, were among the consistent blue ribbon winners in the sheep division.

87 Receive Old Age Payments

charge of all the work formerly performed by township and borough superintendents amounting to $1,144.28 were made to 14 persons in the county who were not immediately entitled to monthly benefits.

The monthly benefit roll for the county had more than doubled since the beginning of last July, Mr. Michael said. This increase applied both to the number of individual beneficiaries and the total of payments. During last June, 36 persons in Centre county received $543.95 in monthly payments.

"This increase is to be expected," Mr. Michael said. "For one thing more workers are meeting the limited employment requirements and are gaining this insurance protection for themselves and their families. For another thing, more workers are forced into retirement by age. A third factor is the regrettable fact that more workers die as time goes on and consequently their families become eligible for the insurance payments which the breadwinner earned and paid premiums on while he was able to work."

"We may expect the monthly benefit rolls to increase numerically and in money with each passing month for many years to come. As the rolls increase the beneficial effects of the program in preserving homes, keeping families from want and limiting loss of buying power through death and old age will become more and more apparent."

Mr. Michael expressed the belief that a larger proportion of eligible widows, wives, children, and parents are applying for benefits now than was the case during the early months of 1940 when the scope of the program had not been widely publicized.

The November payments in Centre county were divided as follows: 40 retired workers, $763.34; 16 widows of retired workers, $157.16; 22 dependent children of retired or deceased workers, $243.15; and 9 widows of insured deceased workers when they became 65, regardless of whether they have dependent children in their care. Widows who are less than 65 years old may receive monthly payments only while they have dependent children under 18 years in their care. Dependent children, up to age 18, may receive monthly benefits if the insured wage earning parent retires or dies.

Dependent parents receive monthly payments only in cases where a fully insured worker dies without leaving a widow or children who may receive monthly benefits immediately or at some future date. Lump-sums are paid in nearly all cases where an insured worker dies without leaving any survivor who is entitled immediately to monthly payments.

A worker is fully insured if he has coverage in half the calendar quarters that elapse between December 31, 1936 (his 21st birthday, if that is later) and the date of his death or 65th birthday. The worker's primary insurance benefit is computed on the basis of his average monthly wage. The benefit consists of 40 per cent of the first $50 of the average monthly wage, plus 10 per cent of the balance (up to a total of $250). One per cent is added to this sum each year of coverage. Thus a worker with an average wage of $100 and years of coverage would have a primary insurance benefit of $25.

The wife's, child's and parent's monthly payment is one-half that of the worker and the widow's benefit is three-fourths of the worker's.

Mr. Michael pointed out that claims may be filed and information obtained at his office during usual business hours, or at the following part-time office at the time indicated: Bellefonte: Employment Service Office, Spring and Pike streets, third Monday of each month, 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. Altoona Hospital Patient Hangs Self

Second Attempt at Suicide Proves Successful to Man Mentally Ill
After failing to kill himself Monday with an ice pick, 35-year-old Frank Lidwell of Ashville strangled himself Tuesday night while locked in a strong room at Mercy hospital, Altoona. It was reported he was mentally ill.

A nurse discovered his body in a sitting position at the foot of his bed. One end of the tie was fastened to the cross bar of the metal bed, the other was around his neck. Lidwell was admitted to the hospital Monday noon after he plunged an ice pick through his breast at an Altoona auto junk yard. The tip of the pick touched his heart. He was put in the men's surgical ward, a nurse at the hospital said, but after learning his disposition, it was deemed necessary that he be confined to the barred strong room on the fourth floor. Up until his death, his condition was listed as "fair."

The victim was described as being melancholy, but for what reason, it was not learned. Hospital attaches said Lidwell had talked to several visitors earlier in the evening hours.
