CHESTER BARNES FACES BIG PROBLEM IN HATBORO

Hatboro, town of about 3500 inhabitants in Bucks county, was stunned, then electrified, by the announcement that the Brewster Aeronautical Corporation will build a $5,000,000 plane plant employing 10,000 men just outside the town.

The mammoth plant will cost twice as much as the assessed valuation of all property in Hatboro. Citizens of the community are now soberly considering how the gigantic increase in population is to be handled, and among them is Chester Barnes, supervising principal of Hatboro's schools, native of Bellefonte and brother of Mrs. Dale Henderson and Homer P. Barnes, of this community.

Mr. Barnes, commenting upon the news plan, is quoted as saying: "We recently added eight new classrooms and a gymnasium at a cost of more than $200,000. There is a small margin of accommodations for new pupils, and ample ground for school expansion if that becomes necessary to educate the children of aircraft factory workers." The present enrollment of Hatboro's grammar school and high school is 750.

Nevin B. Noll, of Philadelphia, formerly of Bellefonte, posted this office from Miami, Florida, that he arrived in that city last week for his annual four-weeks' winter vacation in that southern resort. AS I SEE IT

By HORACE SENTZ

A dime will buy a lotta stuff, like candy, peanuts, gum, soda or a powder puff, or coffee for a bum. Some folks think it's just the thing to spend their dimes for beer, to make their stinkin' spirits sing, or buy themselves some cheer. Some dimes go into Junior's bank, he's savin' up for college, so he kin get a job with swank because he's got the knowledge. There's dime stores too that specialize in cheap merchandise galore. Most folks think they economize, at they live 'n ten cent store. N' then there's ten cent matins, with special wild west thrillers, for which each kid a thin dime pays, to see them killer-dillers. Now all these things we mention here, is stuff a dime will buy. But as Jan thirtiee draws near, we begin to wonder why so many dimes is spent for trash, n' things we throw away. When them same dimes could help to smash the I. P. crippin' kids to-day, that March of Dimes is goin' nice, to crippled kids unfetter, but if well kid's sacrifice, that march'd go much better. To older folks n' kids that young, may this column touch your heart. We hope your conscience'll be stung, if you ain't done your part. When all them dimes has marched away, may you with satisfaction smile, n' to your neighbors proudly say, my dime has reached the pile.

PLANE TAKES OFF FROM HIGHWAY AT TIPTON

Traffic on the new three-lane highway of route 209, abreast of Stultz airport, Tipton, Pa., Tuesday afternoon included, among all things, an airplane.

The craft was a light Piper Cub that took off westward on the highway and winged its pilot, William Crockett, of Sacramento, Cal., toward his home.

Paul Peterson, manager of Stultz field, said Orl tried a dozen times in vain to lift his small ship into the air from the airport runway since Saturday, but the plane's speed was insufficient against the odds of heavy snow that covered the field.

The California aviator, who landed at the field after a flight from Lock Haven, finally obtained permission from the state highway department office at Hollidaysburg, Peterson said, to use the highway as a runway with auto traffic held in abeyance. Or, uneventfully raised his craft skyward and headed for Pittsburgh and Columbus, Ohio, Peterson said.

Peterson described the highway as ideal for a runway.
