Members of women's clubs gathered here from towns throughout the state for the five-day session will hear prominent speakers from all parts of the country and from South America. The theme, "Some Challenges of a Changed World," will deal with woman's place in the defense picture.

WRAPS SELF IN DYNAMITE. IS BLOWN TO PIECES

A 41-year-old lumberjack blew himself to pieces with nine sticks of dynamite Monday in Union county in which Coroner C. F. Roth described as suicide "apparently induced by prolonged ill health." Roth said Oliver P. Fry stuffed two sticks of dynamite in his pockets, tied three more around his waist, clutched two in each hand and then touched them off with a fuse.

Employed in the lumber camp of Ollie Hummel at New Berlin, Fry disappeared after lunch and what remained of his body was found four hours later about half a mile from the logging operations.

the physician at the jail in which Grist was incarcerated before his conviction; and the third note was addressed to a Dr. Whetzer, who has not been identified here. The notes were immediately sent to Stanley P. Ashe, warden of the Western State Penitentiary at Pittsburgh, of which Rockview is a branch. Whether they contained any information as to the reason for Grist's suicide is a matter of conjecture here, since no report has been received from Pittsburgh.

The body was claimed by the man's parents, residing in Scotland, and was turned over to them early Monday morning. Services and interment were to be made in Scotland.

Grist's suicide is the first one to occur at Rockview penitentiary since about 15 or 16 years ago when an inmate climbed to the top of a smoke stack on a prison building, and plunged down the inside of the stack. His body was found during an intensive search launched after his disappearance was discovered.

that had the outbreak occurred earlier in the school year a major epidemic might have resulted. The closing of schools is believed to have checked the spread of the disease.

The report of the dental hygienist revealed that during the year just ended 801 elementary and 126 high school pupils had teeth cleaned. A total of 169 talks were given during the year, and 631 corrective advice cards were issued. Of that number 195 cards were returned with work completed. Twenty-five pupils received dental treatment in the clinic, and of that number, 17 have been completed.

Total circulation of the school library for the year was 19,067, or an average of 58 books a day. The total was 988 volumes greater than the circulation last year. Sixty-six books were rebound by NYA workers, and many others were repaired and washed. It was reported.
