While Paul urged the Corinthians Christians not to be too intimate with these people, we feel sure that he did not mean that they were to be absolutely ignored. There is a great difference in one's having an an intimate friend one of whose life one does not approve and having William J. Shope, et ux, to Homer an interest in that person in the B. Paul not only advises Christians to avoid close fellowship with evildoers in their daily lives, but also declares that they should not be allowed to have the fellowship of the church. Dr. Chas. R. Erdman says: "Possibly the time has come now for the Church to consider the discipline, not only of men guilty of the gross sins with which this section of the epistle especially deals, but also of those who are 'breedy of gain,' and 'guilty of extortion,' and "abusive in their language, Such action might cause some consternation in our complacent modern Church, but it might bring a stirring, surprising, awak-

Our next scripture passage comes from Titus and while the letter to the Corinthians was sent to a group of people, this letter was sent to an dividual. Paul gives instructions to five different groups. First he suggested that aged men be sober. abstaining from wine, grave, tem perate, sound in faith, in charity and in patience. Second, he said that aged women should be well behaved not given to slander or intemperance, rather they should teach the young women Christian virtues. Third, advice was given to the young women that they love their husbands and children that they be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, obedient to their own husbands, thus bonoring God. He also advises the young men-they are to be sober-minded, curbing their passions and desires. His final instructions are to Titus, himself, who was a preacher of the gospel.
