The art of making cookies in the home is coming back. What each of the three little girls above are sure of at the moment is that no other cookie could taste as good as one of those hot sugar cookies right out of the oven of mother's new G-E range, served with a glass of cool milk from the refrigerator. ## Unity Plea Made By Admiral Byrd

Famous Explorer Vehemently Denies President Seeks War

Declaring that slavery is worse than war, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd urged the country to unite behind the President in fighting the spread of Nazi terror.

Admiral Byrd, known for his successful exploration in the Arctic and the Antarctic, made his plea in a remarkable address delivered in Madison Square Garden, New York City, before an audience of 15,000 people.

To those who call President Roosevelt a warmonger, Admiral Byrd made this reply: "The President has been accused of trying to get this nation into war. I can give you my personal word that Roosevelt, the man, has a deep hatred for war—deeper perhaps than many who have made this criticism.

"Roosevelt, the President, has the task of carrying American democracy forward under God against any resistance, and it is his duty to do that above all things. If he can do it without war, he will do it. But there are things infinitely worse than war, and the worst of these is slavery."

Admiral Byrd summed up his belief in President Roosevelt's leadership and the need for a vigorous national policy in these paragraphs: "Firmness, courage, strength and more strength—that is the need of the hour. Our President has demonstrated all these qualities in this emergency. This is a world half of which has already been driven back to a primitive state; a world where the weak and the timid are quickly wiped out; where animals eat animals; where betrayal, ambush and murder are the rule.

"Defeatism, appeasement, timidity—these have no place in our defense against this savage kind of world. There can be no division of opinion about that. But there is as I have said, division of opinion as to how we shall defend ourselves. Some believe in positive action and others in passive defense. This is partly a military matter, and certainly it is a military failure to let it be possible to defend ourselves by standing guard at our frontiers and waiting for the attack, with the enemy free to choose his own time and our weakest point.

"In all history nothing but disaster has come from a passive attitude toward organized violence."

"I have tried to tell you our duty in hard-boiled realistic terms. I rest my case on those terms. But there is something in this crisis which transcends hard-boiled realism. I am thinking of the 'terrible silence of the gagged millions of Europe.' Isn't there a moral issue here, an issue that I cannot help but believe means something to most of us? It is the issue between human decency, common kindness and sympathy, on the one side, and inhuman brutality on the other.

"We know that the lust for world conquest, the brutal persecution of innocent human beings, the degradation of the human spirit, we know that these things are wrong. We know that we stand on trial today before the eyes of our Maker and before the generations of the years ahead, with this greatest of all choices. At the end of one choice lies hell. At the end of the other lies the peace and freedom in which all men may repeat with the Psalmist: 'Behold how good and pleasant it is for brethren to live together in unity.'"

"Here at Madison Square Garden tonight we are enjoying the four freedoms of our Bill of Rights. There is your free press. Here on this platform is your free speech. You who listen to me worship as you please. And here, in this meeting-place, is your free assembly.

"What are we going to do to repay democracy for these freedoms? Are we going to sit back and enjoy them as though no one had ever fought and died for them?—or are we going to make our personal sacrifices every day so that our defense effort may be furthered? Are we going to divide our national house against itself through dissension—or are we going to stand united behind the President as if at war with an unconquerable morale? Americans, what is your answer?"

Snake Charmer in Army
Visitors at Camp Bowie at Brownwood, Texas, don't often drop in at one of the supply tents of the 61st Infantry, Private Glynn E. Kolwyck of Fort Worth, used to travel with a carnival before he was caught in the draft. He still makes a hobby of catching and handling snakes. He had twenty of them, at last reports, in a cage at his company's supply tent. The number is likely to increase, since at least one of the snakes has laid an egg. Never has any man plucked the fruit of happiness from the tree of injustice.—Anon.
