This department is constantly amazed at the type and variety of instruction given first grade pupils The other day the junior member of the family dragged an orange crate to school at the request of the teacher. There never was such a wonderful orange crate! One day, it is reported, the crate was taken apart. In subsequent days the wood was cut up and made into a chair. Crates furnished by other youngsters were converted into tables, settees and other items of furniture. We haven't been able to establish nailing, but the kids love it. Then, too, there are daily reports on the state of health of several bowls of
