"At the last meeting of council the salary of W. W. Bateman, superintendent of Water Works, was fixed at $150 a day for every day in actual service. D. M. Butts was elected Borough engineer. "Observations: What the reporter saw on his rounds of the town, saw a well-dressed white citizen of the town beg a chew of tobacco from an aged son of Africa... Saw an old toper coming out of a hotel barroom wiping his mouth with one hand and tossing in clothes with the other... Saw a gang of street Arabs pawing around in the dirt for gold watches, diamonds, and such trash, in front of Blair's jewelry store... Saw S. D. Ray squinting out of his office windows at a 'vision of passing loveliness,' then hurry to the door to see—about the weather... Saw the cashier of the Daily News deposit $58.88, last week's profits... Saw a farmer get tangled up in the reins and fall out of his wagon with a sack of oats on top of him... Saw three men pass by without offering to set the unfortunate granger on his feet... Saw a brindle cow wink at a member of the Town council and then shin up a tree-box and jerk off a tender branch... Saw several ladies gazing admiringly into Beck's barber shop... Saw Will Rankin coming out of a hardware store with a price list of baby carriages under his arm... Saw a 'banged' head in a second-story window of the Brookerhoff House throw a kiss to a South Ward politician... Saw Billy Jones pin a red-headed man up behind the bank steps and shake something white into his face until the fellow's pulse went up to 140... Saw a wild-eyed terror galloping down High street and dragging a considerable quantity of tinware after him... Saw four men sitting on the Court House steps engaged in a fine-cut spitting match... Saw several other things which it wouldn't do to mention here."

Builder of Clinton County's First Plane (Continued from page one) altitude attained well just about cleared the highest telephone poles. There was little space on the left course for a takeoff and landing due to the waterways on every boundary.

Eight Months to Build It required practically all of his time for eight months to build the airplane, which, while it brought hundreds of spectators and provided many thrills, could not be seen by Mr. Bauman in the light of an instrument which would yield quick accurate returns, so after a year and a half of construction and experimenting with the airplane, Mr. Bauman relegated it to the discard and went into the automobile business.

While building the airplane he was assisting on different occasions by Harold E. Fredericks, of Lock Haven, who later became his brother-in-law. Mr. Bauman soloed over telephone poles and country club lanes in aircraft of his own manufacture.

Mill Hill Man Injured Harry L. Salmon of Mill Hill, R. D. was admitted Wednesday morning to the Lock Haven Hospital, suffering from two broken bones of the left wrist and a fractured ankle. Mr. Salmon fell to the barn floor while unloading soybeans from the top of a load. He also struck his forehead in the fall, sustaining a slight injury there.

THE WAR IN EUROPE

For more than two years the writer of this weekly column on the War in Europe has been trying to appraise the situation that confronts the warring powers. It has not been possible to secure accurate information about many phases and, consequently, observations have been based upon apparent facts. It might be a good idea to review the war generally in order to secure a clearer understanding of the conflict. The smashing of Poland did not convince the world that the Nazi military machine was an instrument well equipped for the stupendous ambition of Hitler's Germany. The illusion of security disappeared when the French army went down like a house of cards in a March wind and, for the first time, the world realized that Hitler was on the verge of mastering the globe.

British Faced Disaster In 1940. In the dark days of June, 1940, when France sought an armistice in violation of her agreement with the British and lacked the courage to follow the heroic examples of the smaller governments in exile, the prospect of British survival depended solely upon the naval and rising air power of the stubborn British nation.

The idea that Great Britain could withstand Goering's Luftwaffe was more hope than confidence but there was some consolation in the belief that no German invasion could be launched as long as the British fleet remained afloat. The epic battle of the sky over England in 1940, resulted in the first outstanding victory against Germany and definitely postponed the Nazi effort to cross the channel.

Situation is Much Improved. There was, in that day, an idea that the British blockade could strangle Germany and Italy economically but there was the possibility that German planes and U-boats might reverse the blockade and strangle the British themselves. The British stood alone against a powerful Axis combination, beset at home, threatened in the Near East from Japan.

The picture has changed considerably in the last fifteen months. Germany has spread her forces through the entire Balkan area and has made enormous territorial gains against Russia but, otherwise, the balance is to be found on the side of the British, who now have, as an ally, the powerful Soviet republic. Here are other factors that have improved the situation for the British and made more difficult the victory that Hitler seeks.

Eight Factors Mean Hitler's Defeat (1) Russian forces, engaged in battle, are inflicting terrific losses upon Germany. When France fell there was little hope that Russia would enter the conflict against Germany and everything that the Red army accomplishes, regardless of its losses, represents a net gain to the British.

(2) The United States has moved definitely and certainly against Hitler. While not engaged in actual warfare, the vast industrial and financial resources of this republic are at the disposal of the enemies of Hitler. This was by no means considered possible when France collapsed.

(3) Italy has failed to exert expected pressure upon the British, or to wrest control of the Mediterranean and North Africa from them. Instead, the British have all but annihilated the Italian fleet and all but conquered the entire colonial empire of the Italians in Africa.

(4) British production, plus American supplies, has enabled the British to confidently await any invasion attempt and the R. A. F. has demonstrated its power to defeat the best that Germany can offer in the air. Gradually, British forces, in other parts of the world, are being strengthened, with planes, tanks, guns and the other paraphernalia of war.

(5) The British fleet retains its control of the vital ocean-ways and exerts tremendous pressure upon German production by preventing the import of sea-borne supplies. This powerful weapon has been immeasurably strengthened by recent "shoot-on-sight" orders, throwing the U. S. fleet into action to protect a vast area in the Atlantic ocean.

(6) The German effort to reverse the blockade has passed its peak and British shipping losses are being reduced. Moreover, the United States has underway a massive ship-building program that will replace all losses and eventually guarantee delivery of necessary supplies and food to the British Isles.

(7) Germany is beginning to experience serious trouble in occupied countries where the people, responding to the brighter outlook, are slowly moving to actual rebellion against their erstwhile conquerors.

(8) Throughout the world, including South America, there is growing evidence of hostility to the Nazi regime and an increasing willingness to cooperate to encompass the complete defeat of Hitler. This is the result of the stout British defense, the resolute decision of the United States and the amazing accomplishment of the Russian army, which together have all but removed the fear of Nazi retaliation.
