EDITORIAL

The trouble with a democracy is that too many citizens suffer from mental paralysis.

The only fault in Sherman's definition of war is that it left no adequate term to define the aftermath.

Just because we have a day set apart for Thanksgiving does not mean that you can't be thankful every day.

Be thankful that you haven't been killed by an automobile thus far in life and try to dodge them another year.

As we gather it, the Axis powers want to run the world and we have the option of thanking them individually, or collectively.

Don't forget this when you are asked to contribute: This year the Red Cross needs our support more than ever before. Its task has been tripled and quadrupled.

SEERGEANT YORK'S OPINION.
Sergeant Alvin P. York, World War hero, feels that America is in real danger because it is smug, self-satisfied and susceptible to over-confidence.

He blames the activities of Lindbergh and other leaders of the America First Committee for this condition, saying, "Unless we wake up, we'll be easier for Hitler than France was." He labels Lindbergh, Wheeler, Nye and other similar leaders as "appeasers of Adolf Hitler."

Mr. York has only one outstanding complaint against a foreign policy of appeasement. "It won't work," says he. "Everybody should have learned this by now especially after the attack upon Russia which for years did everything possible to appease Hitler."

For the moment, that he is licked. Now is the time, he adds, "to pour in every available weapon that we possess and crush the monster." This advice, he admits, makes him an interventionist, but he continues, "I am proud of the label."

Americans may be interested in Sergeant York's statement: "I am not afraid of war. I went through one and I hated every minute of it. No one who lived through the last one could possibly have any other feeling. We all hate it. And yet we cannot avoid this new war unless, like Lindbergh, we value our present security more than we value liberty and freedom and democracy."

SUPPLIES MUST REACH RUSSIA.
The importance of the Russian front against Hitler cannot be overestimated; it is the one hope of shortening the duration of the war.

The problem that confronts Russia involves supplies. The German advances have undoubtedly crippled the Soviet industrial capacity which means fewer planes, tanks and guns for the Red Army.

In view of the industrial capacity of Germany and occupied Europe, the Russian position would be hopeless except for the efforts of Great Britain and the United States to make good, as far as possible, the lost industrial output.

While there are production troubles in Great Britain and the United States, the greatest difficulty in supplying the Red Army involves transportation which includes ships and seaports. Despite her vast area Russia is short of usable harbors.

Most of her coastline is North of the Arctic Circle, where much of the sea is ice-bound most of the year.

The hope of delivering sufficient goods to preserve the Russian front depends upon three seaports, despite disadvantages that involve each one of them. Archangel in the North, is beset by ice and vital railway lines from the port to the interior must be protected.

It is generally believed that the great bulk of British and American supplies must go from the Persian Gulf across Iran to Russian ports on the Caspian Sea. The route is a modern and although efforts are being made to improve its capacity, military experts realize that there is a race against time involved.

Certainly, the United States will send war material to Russia, using such ports as are available. There should be no misunderstanding of our motives in this country. We are not aiding the Russians, committed to the defeat of Hitler, this nation seeks to keep the Red Army fighting in the hope that a successful resistance by the Red Army will limit our participation in a world-wide struggle.

There were 40 patients in the hospital at the beginning of this week in former years. The West Penn Power Company has announced that because of the defense program it will be unable to furnish power lines and power for lights to brighten up community Christmas trees in towns served by the company. But in Bellefonte Chamber of Commerce officials are considering ways to overcome the lack of electric power and chances are that the community tree will be lighted as brilliantly as usual.

Erection of the small trees along the curbs of the business district will begin this weekend, it was reported by Cyrus Shope who has the contract for furnishing trees to the merchants.

As has been the case in the past, individual merchants will furnish lights for small trees.

A feature of the pre-holiday season will be a community caroling on the Diamond from 8 to 9 p. m. Tuesday evening, December 23. The girls' and boys' glee clubs of the Bellefonte High School and choirs of all churches will participate in the group singing with Mrs. Lenore Martin as director. W. Bruce Garner, will be in charge of a brass quartette from the Bellefonte High School Band which will play a number of selections during the evening.

Hunters Get Big Coons
Two of the largest raccoons ever taken in Sonestown section were taken this season by two local hunters, James "Peck" Sores and Gibson Whitmoyer and their dog, Peanut. The dog trailed and treed two males near Celestia and the men shot both from the trees. They weighed 22 and 30 pounds. The coons were placed on exhibition at Sonestown. One was minus a front foot and the other had only about three inches of tail remaining.

more adequate storage space so that records can be kept in such a manner that they are easily available. Included in the transfer of the County Superintendent's office into the Heverly building are a number of other agencies. In addition to Mr. Rogers, his assistant Lewis H. Lenhart, and their clerk, Miss Eugene Cowher, there will be Eugene T. McDonald, newly appointed supervisor of special education; Helen Geer, home economics supervisor; William J. Tucker, agricultural supervisor and Mrs. Lena P. Walte, who is employed on a defense project.

To speed construction on new buildings at the Naval Academy, five quarries supplied the needed granite.

In about four months the average American will realize that it takes money to prepare for national defense.

George Hackenberg, who resides north of Fiedler, in lower Penna Valley, shot a black squirrel last week. Out looking after the triple line, Hackenberg saw the black-fellow run across the road and followed him until he could bring his 22 into play. He expects to get the animal mounted. The squirrel was a big one, weighing close to two pounds, a male of the species, which the hunter regretted having shot.

After fourteen consecutive years, the Gordon Hunting Club, in Poe Valley, will have to get another cook, Sumner Wance, a Leeburg farmer and datsyman, finds himself handicapped in his help problem. Four sons, all away from home, put the job up to Sumner himself, so he has decided that, after fourteen years, he will not go into the mountains this year to cook for the men from the downcast section of the state. Two of Sumner's boys are in the army and two are employed away from home.

Allow Overtime To Mill Workers

in Pennsylvania and Delaware. One watchman received $451.25, and the other received $9.35, he said, as sums due them because they had been paid only straight time for all hours worked instead of time and one-half for all hours in excess of 40 per week. The main office of the company is located at 210 Sansafrey street, Selinsgrove. "Under the Fair Labor Standards Act," said the regional directors, "all employees engaged in interstate commerce or the production of goods for interstate commerce are entitled to time and a half for overtime after 40 hours per week. This includes watchmen, office workers and all other so-called non-production employees.

"Officials of the company were under the impression that overtime pay did not have to go to watchmen, but when an inspector for the Division explained the act to them, they gave excellent cooperation in computing the amount due and arranged to make immediate payment on a voluntary basis."

OVER THE COUNTY

Henry Sassaman, aged 20, of Beavertown, has been selected as a skilled worker to be sent to help production of war supplies in English factories. Answering a call for volunteer workers issued by the State Employment Office, young Sassaman submitted his application and his qualifications more than met the requirements. Arrangements are now being made for his trip to the British Isles. The young machine worker was formerly an enrollee of the National Youth Administration Resident Defense Center at Williamsport, where he was prepared for machine work in the Williamsport Vocational School shops.

Fractures Back

Harry Kaufman, of Danville, suffered a fractured vertebrae when he fell 20 feet to the ground from a ladder near his home. Kaufman was painting his home when the ladder swayed backward and toppled the man to the ground. He landed against the home of his next door neighbor. Another neighbor took Kaufman to the Geisinger Hospital immediately.
