"If soldiers are on active duty where they can't get baths." she said, "rubbing themselves all over with the mitt will remove dead skin and make them teel as fit as though they had stepped out of a needle shower."

Introvert, Extrovert

People are called 'introvert" when they turn all their experiences in upon their consciousness and keep them there. "Extroverts" do just the opposite; they refer all their experiences to external objects and persons. Introvert characteristics include such items as sensitiveness, cautiousness, seclusiveness, daydreaming, worrying and carefulness about details. Extroverts are very sociable, seldom worry, live much through their senses, are good promoters and dislike details.

Rattling Doors

Pesky rattles in doors of automobiles can sometimes be easily silenced, the emergency service department of the Automobile Club of Southern California advises. Such noise is usually due to the shifting of wear of the striker plate which catches the latch. By loosening the screws and adjusting the plate for proper position, the door is held snug. If excessive wear prevents proper adjustment, a thin square of lead under the plate may

All That Fluoresces-

All rock that fluoresces is not tungsten, a mining expert stated recently. Prospectors use fluorescent lamps when searching for the much valued defense ore, but some are fooled when they think that evecything that glows under the lamp is tungsten. Besides tungsten ore, materials which will fluoresce include zircon, calcite, zinc, uraniim, phosphate, anthracene, powellite and common sagebrush.

Army Slang The old army slang suffered a terrific blitzkrieg. A horse or mule is still a hayburner, and a few of the other old terms remain. But a veteran of the first World war suddenly finding himself in the middle of a 1941 training camp would practically have to learn to talk all over again. Here are a few samples of the new streamlined, mechanized version: Galvanized gelding

'Poor Fish' The expression "poor fish" may owe its origin to the habit one male All who like to sleep on their fish has of following his mate around stomachs, but get tired of having to as she lays her eggs. The male colkeep rearranging their pillows in lects the eggs and stores them in a order to breathe freely gaped releathery pouch under his body and cently at an invention consisting of there they remain until batched. This fish is called the Hippocamput

Seven Famons Stars Mythology's explanation of seven famous stars in the constellation Ursa Major is that Callisot, one of Jupiter's many wives, was transformed into a bear and set in the beavens in seven-star formation. Those seven stars are called The
