Both vehicles were considerably damaged about the front. Chief of Police Harry Dukeman, of Bellefonte, investigated the mishap. -February 2, 1942, must have been a sunny day for it was on that date that the United States invaded Florida. How do we know it was sunny? Its simple deduction. February 2, 1919, was Groundhog Day and it is only natural to assume that the rest of the United States, most of it, shivering in the throes of winter, would turn covetous eyes toward Florida if Groundhog Day dawned bright and clear promising six more weeks of winter weather. When Monday of this week, also Groundhog Day, brought low temperatures and clear skies, most of us wished for more Florida to buy and the what-ever for it was with.
