YOUR HEALTH

How does the health of Americans in the first year of this war compare with their health during the first year of the other World War? In a recent survey covering a large cross section of the population, our health appears to be very good. Last year, the death rate of 7.4 per 1000 persons was the lowest on record and 2 per cent below the previous minimum. In 1917 the death rate was 11.6 per 1000, or more than half as high again as in 1941. This improvement in the death rate since 1917 has been reflected in all age groups. In the age group, 1 to 4 years, the death rate in 1941 was 80 per cent below that of 1917. From ages 5 to 34 the decrease has been approximately 70 per cent. Even among older persons, from 65 to 74 years, the death rate has fallen 30 per cent. The most outstanding health improvement showing last year was in pneumonia. Tuberculosis also showed an excellent reduction, with a decline in the death rate since 1917 of 77 per cent. For Victory: Buy Bonds.

MOSHANNON

Five other diseases, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, appendicitis and deaths related to childbirth also recorded new low mortality rates last year. The health of Americans is in excellent condition to cope with those special problems which are sure to arise during the wartime period ahead. DO YOU KNOW The term "blood bank" is not merely a metaphor, for just as one cannot draw money from a bank without a previous deposit, so depletion without replenishment and maintenance of an adequate balance would soon cause a blood bank to cease to function and close its doors. All blood banks need more deposits. FARM CALENDAR Timely Reminders from the Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture. Give Horses Good Care—Horses and mules can do twice as much work as they are expected to do if they are well fed, properly conditioned, and work is intelligently arranged for them, according to Penn State livestock extension specialists. Tips on New Milk House—A new milk house should be constructed with concrete floors and the walls because of sanitation. In placing the new building, it should be remembered that for each three and one half feet the structure is placed from the barn, it is necessary to walk one mile each year to care for the production of one cow. Improved Red Clover—Farmers who wish to be more sure of a good crop of red clover in 1942 and who wish to get maximum yields of hay can now sow certain strains of medium red clover. Those from Berks, Lancaster, Franklin and Indiana counties have given consistent increases in yield of hay in tests at the Pennsylvania State College. Cutting Lamb Carcasses—The lamb carcass is very easily cut up with only a sharp knife or a good saw on a clean table or bench. Be sure the carcass has been thoroughly cooled, state Penn State livestock extension specialists. A Tip to Beekeepers—Beekeepers can aid the war effort by helping to increase the supply of sweets. More honey can be produced without the purchase of large quantities of new equipment or speculation in beekeeping. Use the equipment now on hand, urge Penn State extension beetmen. Poets' Corner

AU REVOIR The words of a song Came back to me, As we parted at the station; And I thought I saw A tear drop fall, Or was it imagination, Say au revoir but not good-bye, Were the words that came to me, And they kept running Through my mind, As I kissed you tenderly, The hours we spent together Will linger in my memory, And through the days to come, Be like the pearls of a rosary, For parting makes us sad, But reunion again is sweet, So let's look forward to the day When again we shall meet. —L.
