RANDOM ITEMS

ordered that every other parking meter in Bellefonte be headed. We think the action is a happy one, for now those who want to avail themselves of the convenience of meters may continue to do so, while those who resented the implied "macing" of the all-metered town may obtain two-hour free parking as was the case before public sentiment was aroused by the 100 per cent metering of the business area. The gates of the town are once again open to our citizens and rural patrons and the "Welcome" mat is at the door. Bellefonte, we feel, has taken a step forward.

JALOPIES:

A reader asked us to have something sharp and pithy to say about two young hep-cats who drive around Bellefonte in ancient and battered versions of Henry Ford's gift to motorists, vintage of about 1929. We can't say anything against them, and wouldn't if we could. We can't because we've driven too many a junk heap ourselves. We wouldn't because those of you who drive around in sleek, noiseless cars can't appreciate the fun of piloting an ancient but mechanically sound wreck. Nope. The kids can go on driving their old cars. They'll have a lot of fun, learn a lot of things that won't hurt them. But here's a good rule to remember. Never get any car under motion unless you're sure, first, that you can stop, and stop quickly, if you have to.

QUESTION:

What two Bellefonte business places have defective electric signs hanging out in front which raise all ned with radios within a radius of several blocks? And why isn't something done about them?

PENN STATE GRADUATES RANKED HIGH IN MED SCHOOL

Graduates of the pre-medical curriculum at the Pennsylvania State College have made an excellent record in various medical schools, a ten-year report indicates.

Slightly more than 96 per cent of the former Penn State students who entered medical school completed their course, the report shows.

Of these, 82 per cent had a clean record, while 14 1/2 per cent failed one or two subjects and were re-examined with a clean record through re-examinations. Only 3.3 per cent failed, and 6 per cent withdrew for reasons other than scholarship.

The thorough foundation in chemistry, physics, and the sciences required at Penn State is largely responsible for the success of the Penn State pre-medical graduates.

SMALL GAME NEEDS SUPPLY OF RAGWEED

Small game hunters who are victims of hay fever may be torn between two desires, according to Logan J. Bennett and P. E. English, wildlife specialists at the Pennsylvania State College. Ragweed, traditional cause of hearty sneezes and runny noses in late summer, provides essential winter feed for such game birds as quail and pheasants.

To wish the destruction of all ragweed at blossoming time is entirely understandable, they affirm, but it could be accomplished only with a certainty that many feathered game birds would find snowy graves the next winter. Quail, pheasants, and other birds as well, are faced with one alternative at this season—stiff food or the ragweed stands up stiff and straight and holds out its seeds above the March and February snows for convenient feeding by birds.

WILL REVISE MAILING LIST FOR AG BULLETINS

In an effort to conserve printed matter in line with war-time needs and general economy, the Pennsylvania State College Agricultural Experiment Station is revising its mailing list. Abstract cards announcing recently published bulletins have been mailed periodically in recent years to more than 40,000 persons. Anyone who does not return the coupon portion of card which he will receive in the next few days will have his name dropped from the mailing list immediately.

YOUR HEALTH

Influenza is one of the most baffling of diseases of the last century. Records of influenza epidemics go back to the Tenth Century. The people of all countries have been visited with influenza periodically. Records show at least eight worldwide pandemics of influenza with their preceding and succeeding regional epidemics. A pandemic is a world-wide epidemic.

The last great pandemic of influenza in 1918-1919 swept the world killing more persons than did wounds and other sickness together during World War I.

During such a pandemic, influenza breaks out spontaneously in various parts of the world—this in 1918 it appeared simultaneously in Boston and Bombay.

Many different agents have been named as causing influenza. That it is caused by a filterable virus is accepted by all.

There is a tendency, however, to label as influenza almost any respiratory illness.

Fever, general malaise, aching and perspiration without other evidence of local disease is frequently termed influenza.

Influenza has come to mean almost any fever for which no other name can be found.

We do not know the relationship between influenza and ordinary cases of so-called "catarrhal fever," "common cold" or "grippe."

The discovery that influenza may be caused by a virus gave hope that a vaccine might be developed for its prevention.

Much data has been accumulated and the disease has only recently yielded to serious experimental attack.

The prospects for the prevention and control of epidemic influenza are considerably brighter today than they were a decade ago.

Dimples are actually defects due to irregular insertions of muscles or to adhesions formed under the skin. Happily most dimples are so placed in the human physiognomy as to look attractive.

Fat people are usually poor surgical risks and surgeons often delay operation on overweight patients until they have reduced their weight.

ALCOHOL
A noted specialist on nervous and mental diseases at Johns-Hopkins states in his book on "mental diseases" that alcohol and heredity are so closely connected that it is almost impossible to separate them. Pronounced alcoholism in the parents means examples of mental disease and weak-mindedness in the children, provided the alcoholic tendency is not acquired somewhat late in life. Children of pronounced alcoholics are most frequently dull and feeble mental development. Many die at an early age. As a striking instance of these facts, fifteen of them dying at an early age—while the one that grew up was an epileptic.

Darwin states that the families of drunkards do not descend beyond the fourth generation. According to Word, the plan of descent is the following: In the first generation there are moral depravity and alcoholic excesses; in the second, drunkenness and maniacal ideas, particularly those of murder; in the fourth generation the imbeciles and idiots appear and the family becomes extinct.

The action of alcohol directly upon the nervous system can be definitely traced as the cause of a large number of the total admissions to any general asylum. The lower the social class the more frequent the insanity from alcohol. This may be partly due to the very cheap grade of liquor which they drink and also to the poor quality of their food.

It was a sad day for the people of the United States, when the government again legalized alcohol. Already we see its effects in the increased number of accidents on the highways. It is taking its toll more and more. God made water and put an abundant supply upon the earth as the beverage for men and animals. Alcohol is a poison to all animal and plant life. Alcohol interferes with the water in the body; it actually aborts and devours it whenever it comes in contact with it in the body. It abstracts water from the muscles, the brain, the nerves and the digestive juices. The body is gradually destroyed from the constant use of alcohol.

The sensation of warmth that is experienced after drinking alcohol is due to the dilation of the surface blood vessels. Arctic explorers have found that it is extremely dangerous to drink whiskey when exposed to extreme cold because the blood after a drink rushes to the surface of the body, which causes it to lose heat rapidly and the person is in danger of freezing to death.

Alcohol paralyzes the higher brain cells and stimulates the lower animal instincts. In other words, it has a selective affinity for the brain, and while it injures every part of the body, the fact that it completely debilitates the reason, is a sufficient cause why it should not be sold to the public as a beverage.

Far better would it be that our children, should never have been born, than to grow up to become drunkards.

Sound Teeth and Bones
Milk furnishes an abundant supply of calcium and a helpful supply of phosphorus, vital food minerals the body needs for strong teeth and bone structure. Calcium is also necessary for steady working of the heart and for normal muscular activity.
