Sugar Rationing Begins Monday

with any person over 18 years old in the family being qualified to register all members of the family group.

Such a person upon registering a family unit should be prepared to give the following information about every member of the unit: height, weight, color of eyes, color of hair, age, and sex. These questions must be answered on the registration form.

Persons who are not members of a family unit must register individually for ration books. The parents, guardian or other responsible adult may register for those under 18 who are not self-supporting or such persons may register for invalids who are not members of a family unit and who are not confined to institutions.

A person who is not a member of a family unit and who is temporarily away from home, may register anywhere for his ration book.

A person who is a member of a family unit, and who is temporarily away from home, will not apply for his own ration book. His book should be applied for by the member of the family unit who registers the unit.

Persons 18 years or over who are going to college should apply for their own book in the town where they reside during the college year. The father or mother of such students should not apply for a book for such students.

If a person under 18 years old has left home to attend school, and is not a member of some other family unit, the father or mother must apply for a book for such student. A person is entitled to a ration book even if he obtains his meals entirely in restaurants, hotels or other eating establishments and even though he has no intention of buying any sugar. The book later may be used to ration some other product and he may need it.

The registration forms are to be filled out by the registrant, with either typewriter, indelible pencil, or ink. They will become permanent records and must be filled out completely. Answer all questions.

Each person is permitted to have on hand at time of registration two pounds of sugar, for which no stamps will be removed from the ration book. For the next four pounds on hand over the two-pound allowance, one stamp will be removed from the book for each pound. When an applicant has more than 6 pounds on hand at time of registration, the application will be filed but no rationing book will be given at the time of registration.

In case of family units the amount of sugar which will be permitted without removal of ration stamps is to be computed by multiplying by two (pounds) the number of persons in the family unit, and subtracting that amount from the total sugar on hand. The balance represents excess which will be cancelled by the removal of one stamp for every pound. Stamps are to be removed equally from the ration books of all members of the family unit.

For example: A family of five persons has 15 pounds of sugar on hand. They are entitled to have ten pounds without penalty. Five pounds will represent excess, and the registration official will remove one ration stamp from each of the five books in the family group. The ration books will contain 28 stamps, each of which represent a weekly allowance. Each of the first four stamps will entitle the purchaser to buy one pound of sugar. The remaining stamps will entitle the holder to only one-half pound of sugar, but the amount allowed may be changed by governmental orders.

All sugar sales were halted on Monday of this week and the ban will continue until Monday, May 5. On or after that date, citizens may purchase sugar as soon as they have obtained ration cards.

Special problems in regard to sugar rationing should be taken before the rationing boards. In Centre county there are two such boards whose territories coincide exactly with the territories of the two Local Draft Boards.

Rationing officials point out that no one will suffer any great hardship through sugar rationing. The consumption of sugar will be reduced, but if there is some special and worthy need on the part of an individual for more sugar, the board will act on such requests. Sugar stamps must be removed from ration books by the storekeeper or clerk from whom you buy sugar. Don't tear out stamps yourself and take them to the store. You must present the book, with stamps intact. Rationing officials also point out that ration stamps are not money—you'll also have to pay for the sugar as you always have. The stamps merely give you the right to buy a certain amount of sugar.

A person can't hoard up his stamps and buy a quantity of sugar at one time. If you don't buy sugar during the week for which a specific stamp is in force, you lose the right to purchase that week's sugar. Stamps are good only for the week designated.

Anyone can take your ration book to the store and buy sugar for you. You can order your sugar by telephone and have it delivered. The deliveryman will tear out the stamps from your book, but if you order more sugar than you have stamps to cover, he'll be required to take the extra amount back to the store. Ration books are not transferable.

In the event of death, the deceased's ration book must be surrendered to the rationing board. If you lose your book, report the loss at once to your rationing board. If you find a ration book, it won't do you any good—particularly if you try to use it. A person doesn't have to buy sugar each week if he doesn't need it. If you pass up a week without using your stamp, the stamp merely becomes inactive.
