CHAMPIONS PICKED AT PENN STATE EXPOSITION

Trophies and ribbons were awarded to winners in the showing and fitting contests of the Little International Livestock Exposition sponsored recently at the Pennsylvania State College by the Block and Bridle Club, livestock organization.

John H. Holbert, Genesee, was named grand champion fitter, and Glenn R. Kean, Franklin, grand champion showman. The reserve grand champion fitter was Jacob B. Gongaware, Jeannette, and the reserve grand champion showman, William M. Painter, Greensburg. The winners of the grand championships fitted and showed sheep, while Gongaware fitted a hog and Painter showed a horse.

Holbert was champion sheep fitter and Gongaware was champion horse fitter, and the champion cattle fitter was Clayton F. Northrup, Dalton.

Kean was champion sheep showman and Painter was champion horse showman. Champion cattle showman was Theodore H. Hogg, Slippery Rock. Mr. Manning is Taite, Tunkhannock, was champion swine showman.

Winner of the pig derby was Laura Jane Weaver, Canonsburg, a junior in home economics. In this form of sport each of the eight girls entered raced her pig, held on leash by means of a dog harness, around a set of hurdles.

TREAT RAYON HOSIERY GENTLY FOR BEST SERVICE

Rayon hosiery needs special handling to give us the service we expect from it, according to Miss Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative of Centre county.

It is advisable to wash each pair of rayon stockings at least 24 hours before wearing it. Rayon takes longer to dry than silk or nylon. We cannot wash rayon stockings at night and wear them again the next morning; they must be dry before wearing. It is best to alternate with two or more pairs.

Rayon stockings do not snag readily when dry, but do when wet. We must always remember to remove rings when we wash rayon hosiery, and never to wring, stretch, or rub rayon stockings.

The bathroom is a poor place to hang rayon hose to dry because the steam will keep the stockings from becoming thoroughly dry. It is better to put them in a dry warm place, out of the sun and away from excessive heat.

ALTOONA WOMAN INJURED IN FALL FROM WINDOW

Mrs. Elizabeth Devore Snyder, 47, of Altoona, fell from a vacant fourth floor room in the downtown Tavern Hotel in Pittsburgh, Friday night and was injured seriously. She landed upon the roof of the Jim Null restaurant, 22 feet below.

The room in the Grant street hotel from which she fell was adjacent to one that Mrs. Snyder had rented on Thursday when she went to Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Snyder suffered a fractured wrist, fractured left arm, fractured right leg, and internal injuries. Allegheny General Hospital attaches said.

She told detectives she suffered a dizzy spell and fell out of the open window.

Former Bellefonte Youth on Bomber

less than 100 feet above the enemy positions with our machine guns blazing, saw an enemy fighter curl down belching smoke.

But to tell it from the beginning: Before daybreak shadowy figures were moving about our base, their muffled tread mingling with the noises of the nearby jungle in the chilled air. Hot coffee appeared miraculously along with hot dogs and dry bread.

Silent American fighting men clustered about the squadron commander for final instructions and weather reports. Somebody said brisely, "Let's get going." The crewmen strolled toward their bombers, whose whirling propellers kicked up swirls of dust.

I was assigned to the bomber piloted by Lieutenant Chris Herron, Pittsburgh. Our co-pilot was Lieutenant Duncan Seffren, Manawa, Wis.

Lieutenant Herron is the son of Mrs. James W. Herron of 5228 Beeler street. His full name is Christopher I. Herron. He is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and was a member of the United States Army Air Corps for two years. Last Wednesday his mother received a cablegram from him in Australia.

Experienced hands fitted me with a "Mae West" life jacket and a bulky parachute. I found difficulty in cramming in between Sergeant George McManamy, Toledo, Ohio, radio man and turret gunner, and Lieutenant Charles L. Smith, Sparta, N. C., the navigator.

Our bombardier was Lieutenant George D. Barnhill, Charlotte, N. C., who occupied the glass-domed nose of the plane, while somewhere back toward the tail were two enlisted men, Fred J. Mickle, Salem, Ind., and H. E. Philo, Fort Wayne, Ind.

The tropic morning breaks with startling suddenness. The engines roar and we are hurtling along the runway. Everybody holds tight. It's tricky business, lifting with a full load of bombs. Sometimes they don't make it.

Mr. Herron Plunges In
Navigator Smith is busy with dividers and chart. McManamy moves after to man the turret gun. Barnhill is studying a chart and aerial photographs of the target. Herron grinningly invites me to move up between the pilot and co-pilot.

"Over the target in 10 minutes," Smitty sings out.

There is a white cloud bank ahead, and Herron's forehead furrows as, with no time to climb over it, he plunges straight through.

And there is Rabaul, the harbor, like a picture postcard, straight ahead. I count seven vessels, but they are not our pigeons. Somebody behind us will attend to them.

We cross the harbor, swooping low. I notice the altimeter registering 1,000 feet. I see ground flashes and smoke balls bursting around us. I hear a sound like cracking walnuts. The altimeter says 700 feet.

Herron croaks through the throat microphone. I can see the target, long, parallel, drab-colored buildings. The bomb bay doors open. Barnhill lets out a fascinated, "The wide-spreading incendiary sticks reach the target. They got what they were supposed to."

"Let's get out now," I think.

The roar of the motors hits a crescendo that becomes a whine as we start climbing.

Jap Troops Run to Cover
The turret gunner reports a Japanese Zero fighter plane on the starboard side. I see him racing ahead of us. Herron is swearing with an oath of profanity. We are over the water, climbing. The Zero ahead climbs high, wings light purple colored, a pretty picture against the cold sunlight.

The Zero turns, swoops down toward us. I think "He's sure to get us." Right-hipped Herron swings our right wing toward the sea. I catch a glimpse of the thwarted Zero, pulling out of its dive, red discs plain on the wings.

Our rear gunner breaks into a mad chatter and I see tracer bullets spray the Zero, some on either side, some square into her belly.

Barnhill wastes no time during that terrific dive. He pours tracers into barges laden with uniformed figures. Now we are down to 75 feet. I recognize the drab uniforms of the Japanese soldiers. They dive overboard as Barnhill's tracers find their target.

And Still They Come
"Here's another, Chris," Barnhill cried.

We turn steeply, pour another stream into the military barges. It seems that they are landing soldiers from two large transports anchored in the harbor. I look back and see billowing columns of smoke, sheets of vivid flame, Japanese soldiers and non-clothed natives running helter-skelter.

We certainly got our target, I think.

Now three other Zeros are giving us attention. We turn and dive over the land toward the sea again. I think, "It'll be too bad if a Zero tries to dive on us now. He'll dive like a submarine."

We zoom up over the sea. The tail gunner reports two Zeros hovering on our tail. Suddenly out of a

WILL VITAMINS RESTORE THE NATURAL COLOR TO HAIR?

The general public is reading with avidity the newspaper and magazine articles which are being published about restoring gray hair to its original color, by the use of vitamins.

Experimental work is really going on along those lines, but so far nothing very definite seems to have come out of it.

Early graying of hair runs in some families and vice versa. The writer has seen people with snow white hair at the age of twenty-one. On the other hand, there are old people beyond eighty years of age who have never become gray.

Some years ago I had a middle-aged patient with snow white hair. She was extremely emaciated and undernourished and had been sick for a number of years. She did not even walk on the street and was very neurotic. Under her eyes, extending almost to her cheeks, she was deeply pigmented, and looked very dark.

I put her to bed for six weeks and ordered an abundant, and very nutritious diet. She rapidly gained in weight and strength, and the pigment under her eyes almost disappeared. Her figure filled out, and her hair close to her head and also the short hair around her forehead changed to a rather dark iron gray. When dismissed, she had taken a new lease on life, and was walking ten blocks or more.

While living in the North, I noticed that most women had graying hair at thirty or earlier. While practicing medicine in the country in South Carolina, I was struck by the glossy black hair of the women. Very few began to turn gray until well up in years. I attributed this to the quiet, placid lives of these people. They worked hard, but they retired early and slept soundly. They read seldom or not at all, but they had but little to fret about. Their

RECENT WEDDINGS

Etters—Bloom
Mrs. Margaret H. Bloom, of Boalsburg, and H. Clayton Etters, of Oak Hill, were married last Wednesday afternoon in the Centre Hall Evangelical parsonage with Rev. W. K. Hosterman officiating. Mr. and Mrs. George Ralston, brother-in-law and sister of the groom, and Mrs. Hayes Ralston were present at the ceremony. Mr. Etters was the former owner and operator of the Oak Hill roller mill. The couple will reside at Oak Hill.

Vest—Tracy
First Sergeant Frederick J. Vogt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vogt, of Lock Haven formerly of Bellefonte, and Miss Lillian T. Tracy, of Philadelphia, were married May 2, in Immaculate Conception church, Germantown, with Rev. Patrick Rooney officiating. The bridegroom was born at Snow Shoe, a son of Fred and Justina Kelley Vogt. The family lived in Bellefonte until about four years ago when they moved to Lock Haven. He is a graduate of St. John's Parochial School, Bellefonte, Immaculate Conception High School, Lock Haven, and attended Lock Haven State Teachers' College. He is also a graduate of Pierce Business School, Philadelphia, and is now First Sergeant of Company A, 2nd Regiment, Quartermaster School, Petersburg, Va. Upon their return from a southern wedding trip, the couple will live in Petersburg.

Circus Trainer Knocks Animal Myths, Beliefs

Eugene Scott, of Louisville, Ky., animal trainer who ran away to join a circus at fifteen and was married with six tigers and nine lions as attendants, explodes the myth that elephants fear mice but he reports the huge beasts never attack women.

The boss of the Cole Brothers Circus manager, who has handled a lot of animals during the past 25 years, admits he can't explain elephants' conduct with women. He says:

"I don't know why, but I've seen elephants which were as tough as they came and had killed men, be as gentle as you can imagine when a woman handled them."

As for fear of mice, Scott laughs at the story and says they pay no attention to them.

Another myth he destroys is the camel's need for great quantities of water. He asserted:

"In their home environment they drink a lot at a time, and can go for days without water, but in captivity a gallon a day is about right, but they have to have it every day."

One fact about camels which is not well known, Scott said, is that they can be very dangerous to handle.

He observed:

"I've seen them grab a man by the arm and swing him in the air until he was almost dead."

Another placid-looking animal which can get very tough is the zebra.

He said that they can kick as fast as a machine gun shoots and they will kill a man in a minute if he gets behind them when they are mad.

high cloud a Zero hurls itself at our portside. I hear his gun rattling as he dips low over us. Again I hear the noise like cracking walnuts, and puff-balls are bursting all around us.

Scared Plenty, Writer Says
Philo reports another Zero is keeping on our tail. The gunner's language when his gun jammed momentarily is unprintable. Then he fires a burst which sent the Zero zooming away. The anti-aircraft fire seems to have stopped.

Now there is only one Zero coming over my way. Herron's eyes narrow as he makes a skillful turn of the wrist and we shoot high up under the Zero. Our turret guns blaze. McManamy's interphone croaks, "That got the so-and-so."

We are racing high, but I don't know whether we are safe or not. Only now do I realize how scared I was all the time.

The whole business from the sighting of the target took about 15 minutes. Herron is loosening his parachute straps. We must be safe now.

In the shower room with Herron I ask timorously:

"Would you call that a hot raid?"

"I'd say it was," he said. "Those tough little babies gave us a run, all right, but I think we gave them plenty of trouble, too."

WILL VITAMINS RESTORE THE NATURAL COLOR TO HAIR?

lives were monotonous, but they were contented; so time seemed to leave but few marks on them.

Recently a magazine having a large general circulation, reported an experiment in which twenty-five persons with gray hair who volunteered as subjects were given 10 to 20 milligrams of calcium pantothenate (a vitamin) daily. Some of these received in addition, capsules containing the vitamin B complex. Restoration of color to hair was stated by the authors of the article to have occurred in twenty-three of the twenty-five subjects after from one to six months of this treatment.

A number of years ago it was noted that laboratory animals kept on poor, almost vitamin-free diets exhibited graying of hair and subsequent restoration of color after certain factors of the vitamin B complex were added to the diets. Observation of this fact, a by-product of earlier experiments, led to recent research which was designed to reveal whether or not certain substances do possess the power of restoring color to gray hair."

Reports from various laboratories vary, from partial or complete successes in restoring color to hair to entire failure.

The pantothenic acid that has been used in the diet to restore color to gray hair is a part of the B complex. There is an individual response to these substances. They seem to restore the color in some cases and utterly fail in others.

People are warned against taking substances of which they are entirely ignorant. There are many worthless, so-called vitamins upon the market, and others that are actually harmful.

Unless a physician tells you what to do you had better not experiment upon yourself for you may do yourself more harm than good. There is nothing that is definitely certain about restoring gray hair to its original color; in every individual.

Sarah Ann's Cooking Class

There is nothing like serving a cool, refreshing salad at the beginning of a meal, to tease the appetite; it also adds color and charm to the table. Be sure the salad plates are cold, just before you serve them; and that the salad you serve blends with the rest of the meal.

Carrot Cube Salad
1 cup cubed carrot
2 cups coarsely chopped cabbage
Salt to taste
Savory mayonnaise
Toss carrots and cabbage lightly; season and add savory mayonnaise.

Savory Mayonnaise
1-2 cup mayonnaise
3-4 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1-4 cup cream
1 teaspoon grated onion
Just before serving combine ingredients in order named and mix thoroughly.

Vegetable Salad
1 head lettuce
1 bunch watercress or other cold meat cut in strips,
8 radishes sliced
1 teaspoon chopped chives
2 hard-boiled eggs sliced
1-2 green pepper cut in rings
1-4 cup French dressing
Break lettuce in bowl and arrange strips of watercress over top. Pile chicken in center, arrange radishes, chives, eggs and green pepper rings around edge. Just before serving add French dressing and toss lightly.

Grape and Peach Salad
2 peaches sliced
1 cup seedless grapes
1-2 cup peanuts
1-2 cup mayonnaise
Combine all ingredients. Serve on crisp lettuce and garnish with small bunches of grapes.

Ambrosia Salad
3 bananas sliced and sprinkled with lemon juice.
1 cup cherries
1-2 cup pineapple diced
1-2 cup marshmallows cut in fourths
1-2 cup mayonnaise
1-2 cup whipped cream
Combine fruit and add marshmallows. Mix with mayonnaise to which the whipped cream has been added. Serve on lettuce.

Pear Salad
1 can pears or slices of fresh pears
Cream cheese
Crystallized ginger
French dressing with celery seed.
Lay slices of pear on shredded lettuce with mixed mound of cheese and ginger mixed. Serve with French dressing.

Shrimp and Green Pea Salad
1 cup of cooked green shrimp
1 cup of cooked green peas
1-2 cup mayonnaise
1-2 cup chopped celery
Green pepper cups
Lettuce—slices of hard-boiled egg.
Combine shrimp, peas, celery, and mayonnaise. Season to taste. Fill green pepper cups and serve on lettuce. Garnish with egg slices and strips of cucumber.

Cucumber Salad
1 package lime gelatin
1 cup hot water
1 cup pineapple juice
1 cup chopped pimento
1 cup grated cucumber
1 cup shredded pineapple
1-4 cup mayonnaise
Pinch of salt.
Dissolve gelatin in hot water. When cool add other ingredients. Put into molds, which have been greased with salad oil. Chill. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Fourth Graders Try Hand at Simple Verse

The "Quiz Kids" can make up verse on the spur of the moment, but so can the fourth graders in the Bishop street school. Writing on the general subject of sleep and rest as a class project in the study of simple verse, Roy Kellerman, aged 9, says:

"I never ask to sit up late,
I never say, 'O Mother, wait!'
I listen when the clock strikes eight
And off to bed I run.
For that's the time for us to rest
Even birds know it's best.
To cuddle up in their little nests
When busy days are done.
Mahlon Sprankle, age 9, writes,
Sleep and rest
For me are best,
I go to sleep without a peep
And never do I weep.
Dolores Markle, also 9, expresses her views as follows:
When I go to bed early each night,
I wake up next morning feeling bright;
But when I stay up with "Mom" real late,
The alarm in the morning I surely do hate!
These pupils are all members of Miss Annette Decker's class.

Plenty of Food but a Shortage of Vitamins

We don't have to worry about shortages of essential foods, say Government authorities. But even in the midst of plenty, millions of Americans are suffering from various Vitamin deficiencies—a serious condition when the war effort demands a strong, healthy people.

Electric range owners are fortunate that the modern cooking methods, so easy for them to use, save the natural food vitamins. Tests by a leading food laboratory show that an average of 91% of the vitamins are conserved through proper temperatures and "waterless" methods. In contrast, old-fashioned cooking sometimes wastes as much as 50% of the essential food values!

When you use your electric range, be sure to take advantage of the easy, modern cooking methods recommended by the manufacturer. You'll save the vitamins so vital to Victory!

*In tests for Vitamins A, B1, B2, C and Nicotinic Acid—on carrots, potatoes, broccoli, and green peas.
