Bell Co. Prepares For Blackouts

Clear telephone lines during and for a half hour after an emergency are just as important as highways cleared for emergency traffic, Jesse H. Caum, manager for the Bell Telephone Company, said today.

Speaking of the practice blackout scheduled for the evening of May 15, the telephone manager pointed out that an air raid warning test is practice for a real emergency. Because it is a rehearsal, he said, people should plan now what they will do if and when an emergency comes.

"The telephone company," he continued, "has the duty to point out the need for holding back on all but emergency telephone calls, not only during but for some time after an air raid or other community emergency."

"For the public safety, key members of the defense forces must be summoned by telephone without delay. Medical and relief agencies must find the lines free for their essential calls. Co-ordination of effort and swift communications are as necessary here at home as they are at the war front. In fact, during a real air raid, every home temporarily is a part of the war front."

"For that reason, the telephone company joins with our civilian defense officials in asking the general public not to use their telephones during an emergency or for a half hour afterwards. All of that time is the critical period."

"Someone may feel that one more call won't make any difference, but multiply that one more call that could wait by hundreds or thousands. It would be like crowding the highways with automobiles when fire apparatus, ambulances and other essential vehicles are all trying to reach an emergency point without a moment's delay."

Others officers elected are as follows: Mrs. John Roberts, vice president; Mrs. Ralph Mitchell, secretary; and Mrs. Ernest Hess, treasurer. Members named to the executive board were Mrs. Frank Baldrige and Miss Rose Haupt.

At the close of the business session Miss Besse Miles, retiring president, reported on the activities and projects carried out by the club during the past year. Miss Miles was presented with a number of defense stamps by the club in token of appreciation for her leadership.

The banquet program included guest speakers, and numbers by the club chorus consisting of Mrs. L. G.

Gas Registration Will End Tonight

Communities in the borderline area include Tyrone, Hollidaysburg, State College, Bellefonte, Lock Haven, Williamsport and Wellsboro.

The counties where rationing is NOT in effect are: Potter, Clearfield, Somerset, Fayette, Westmoreland, Indiana, Jefferson, Elk, Cameron, McKean, Warren, Forest, Clarion, Armstrong, Erie, Crawford, Venango, Butler, Mercer, Lawrence, Beaver, Allegheny and Greene. All other counties are rationing gas.

In Bellefonte today the registration will begin at 1 p. m. and continue until 9 p. m. at the Spring Street Armory School building. Most other communities will hold registrations at the high schools from 3 to 9 p. m. today.

Local rationing officials announced that on Tuesday, the first day of registration, a total of 863 motorists were registered by a corps of 22 high school teachers working from 3 to 9 p. m. Yesterday's total was expected to be slightly larger, since registrars had become more familiar with the work.

At times during the first two days there were lines of motorists awaiting their chance to obtain rationing cards. The work proceeded smoothly and in cases of dispute motorists were referred to the rationing board offices in the County Home, where special cases were acted upon.

Farmers and other non-highway users of gasoline, are exempt from rationing.

For rationing purposes motorists have been divided into five groups. Every motorist is entitled to an "A" card, entitling him to 3 gallons a week for pleasure purposes, or a total of 21 gallons until July 1.

Then come the B-1, B-2 and B-3 classes, each of which allows additional fuel for more than the minimum. The final class is the "X" type, which permits the holder to unlimited purchases. Failing within this group are physicians, nurses, government officials, taxis, buses, and ministers.

Specifically the B-1 cards are for motorists who drive from 6 to ten miles a day, or 33 gallons for the 74-day period until July 1.

B-2 cards are for motorists who drive from 10 to 14 miles daily, or 45 gallons for the period.

Card B-3, for motorists who drive 14 or more miles daily, entitles the holder to 57 gallons during the period.

Rationing officials said yesterday that motorists may use all their ration units in a week—or may allow them to accumulate.

Most motorists have been requesting cards allowing more units than the minimum granted by "A" cards. Many persons asked for the "X" type, but after a special meeting of the board yesterday morning, those asking for greater amounts than the minimum were required to show substantial reason why the 3-gallon per week allotment was not sufficient for their needs.

Persons whose gasoline ration units are exhausted before July 1, may obtain additional allowances of fuel by applying at the rationing board offices, providing they can show some valid need for more gasoline.

During the weekend the streets and highways were jammed with an unusually large number of automobiles as motorists took one last "fill-up" before rationing went into effect. This week many motorists have been filling up their tanks so that they can begin the rationing period with at least a few gallons of fuel in reserve.

Never Made a Fuss

"That's how Chris was, never made a fuss about anything. He didn't move a muscle when one engine stalled on the return flight. Chris took us down within a few feet of the sea. It looked close enough to dangle our feet into it."

"Flying blind on instruments through the rain, Chris managed to feather the props and keep us out of the drink for nearly two hours, which is next to impossible on that type bomber."

"Then the fuel transfer pump stalled. The service tank showed about 50 gallons and the storm was getting worse. Chris told us by intertelephone that he couldn't raise the rest of the squadron and ordered us to jettison the guns and all unnecessary, movable equipment."

Gain a Little Altitude

"We lightened the craft some what and gained a little altitude, but Chris finally called all hands forward and explained the situation. He advised us to bail out. Nobody would leave him alone so everybody decided to ride her down."

"We knew then what Chris intended to do. He wanted to get the crew to safely bail out, then risk his own life trying to save the ship alone."

Lieutenant Noel Wright, Schenectady, who navigated the mission in place of Herron's regular navigator, told the rest of the story. He said Herron ordered the crew into the rear compartment and the five men wedged themselves tightly together with cushions, while he and the copilot, veteran Australian squadron leader Bob Gurney, stayed forward. Gurney directed him to a small island and Herron circled, looking for a landing place.

Recognized as "brilliant comer" in the field of finance and economics Luther Harr was called to serve successfully as instructor, assistant professor and professor at the Wharton School of Finance. During this period of service he was given leave of absence and went abroad to study the European financial situation.

Luther Harr in 1920 was retained as consultant by the Atlantic City Clearing House Association and in 1931 he became a member of the "Philadelphia Records" staff. Courier-Post" and the "New York Post," his term of service with the "Record" terminating in 1941.

Following the election of George Earle, Harr became Chairman of a Special Committee of Budget and Revenue. Under his leadership this committee developed the financial program to which both the Earle and James Administration have adhered.

This program, still in force, is ironically, the one upon which the James Administration bases its hope of ending up an otherwise unfortunate term of service with a treasury surplus.

Governor Earle made Luther Harr his Secretary of Banking. Harr served during a critical period when

Plane Sinks in Morass

"We waded waist deep into the swamp hacking and tearing at the fuselage and liberating our hands and arms trying to liberate Chris. The plane was gradually sinking in the mud. When we reached Chris and felt his pulse, Mickles cried grief-strickenly to Barnhill, 'Chris is dead.'"

"We couldn't believe it and continued to tear the fuselage. When the plane had sunk low in the morass, we knew there was no hope. We waded to higher ground and sank exhausted on the bank. Somebody said a little prayer and we covered the top of the wrecked cockpit with the parachute that Chris could have used but wouldn't."

CEILING PRICES

- Now, and after May 18th (when ceiling prices become effective), all A&P Super Markets and A&P Food Stores will continue to give you real low prices on fine foods every day, just as they have been doing.
- The new "ceiling price" regulation will not alter in any way A&P's low price policy. This means that every day at A&P you will continue to get the best foods the markets afford at our lowest possible prices.
- And here is another important fact to remember. FOOD PRICES WILL NOT BE IDENTICAL IN ALL FOOD STORES on and after May 18th. Prices will continue to differ in food stores on the same articles—just as they have heretofore.

OUR CUSTOMERS SAVE MONEY

A&P, during the last eight years, has made big reductions in its operating costs. These savings have been passed along to our customers, so that today they have 9c more of every food dollar to spend than they did in 1933.

It is A&P's policy to continue to conduct its business as economically as possible, thus to give you the utmost for every food dollar you spend at A&P Stores.
