Repairman Predicts Great Things

when any interruption in current occurs, the clocks downstairs stop. That condition wasn't so bad in normal times when power interruptions were few and far between, Joe explained, but now with blackouts threatening at any time, it might be quite different to keep the court house clocks anywhere near accurate.

So Joe installed a rectifier, relay and a set of batteries. Henceforth the clocks will operate from regular electric power lines, but when the power for any reason is interrupted, the relay will switch the clocks on to the batteries and no time will be lost.

Joe estimated that there are some 70,000 clocks somewhat similar to Bellefonte's town clock in the nation.

The time apparatus operates from a 750-pound weight and the striking mechanism, operating from a 2000-pound weight. Both must be wound up once or twice a week and that job is delegated to Mr. Royer, court house janitor.

The clock is worth between $7,000 and $8,000 today, Mr. Doff said. The bronze bell weighing about 1000 pounds, is worth about $1,900 a pound, or a total of $1,900—and try to buy one at any price under present priorities!

"Is the clock in bad condition?" we asked the clockman.

"The clock is in excellent shape," Mr. Doff said. "It's so good that it can now be made to vary not more than ten seconds in a month!"

Shades of accuracy! Ten seconds a month! What a relief when many of us for weeks have had to plan our lives around the possibility that the town clock might be either ten minutes slower or ten minutes faster than it was yesterday!

—Among our callers Monday were Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Stine, of Sacramento, Calif., who came East several weeks ago for a visit with relatives in Centre and Clearfield counties.
