Farm Loan Official Reports on Meeting

Robert L. Akers, secretary-treasurer of the Centre County National Farm Loan Association, returned recently from a two-day conference held at the Penn Harris Hotel in Harrisburg. Federal Land Bank appraisers and officials from Baltimore were also present and explained and discussed changes necessary to serve the farmer under the present emergency.

The National Farm Association is cooperatively owned by farmers and makes loans available for the purchase of a farm and for general agriculture purposes. Utmost among the details discussed were the rationing of tires and gasoline. Plans were made whereby the work of the Association and of the bank can continue with the same efficiency it has during normal times.

Extra effort is to be exerted as a result of this conference to encourage the borrowers to make use of the higher farm prices of today for the payment of existing debts, but at the same time build reserves to bridge the period when farm incomes may be lower. In urging this, a "future payment fund" has been established in which farmers can put extra income to be used when money might not be as plentiful as it is today.

Credit will be extended to any eligible farmer for making soundly and necessary shifts or developing a complete farm unit to meet the needs of the "food-for-freedom" program. The purpose of the land bank is to bridge the gap between the individual farmer's credit requirements and the money markets of the county, and then to help the farmers get out of debt.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

DIABETES NO. 1

There is a Diabetic Club in Altoona which has more than a million members. Most of them are fat, one out of twenty is thin or of normal weight. The reason for joining the club is to learn how to eat properly. It is seldom that a fat person is sound physically. He is a potential candidate for disease, especially diabetes. People used to think that diabetes was a disorder of the kidneys, because sugar was found in the urine. But this is a mistake as we shall see.

Before the discovery of insulin, diabetes was a very fatal disease, especially to the young, as the cause and treatment were not known. Thanks to the hard labor of two young men, Doctors Banting and his colleagues, we not only know the cause of this dread condition, but we have learned how to treat it. Dr. Frederick Banting was a young orthopedic surgeon, who gave four years in service at the front during the First World War. He came out with plenty of experience, but no money and no backing with which to carry on his experiments. He begged for a little space at the University of Toronto where he might continue his experiments. Finally one of the dignitaries at the medical college gave him a small space in the basement. He enlisted the services of his young friend, C. H. Best, who was a second year medical student.

A generation before, Doctors Van Wering and Minkowski proved that an animal would die of diabetes, if its pancreas were removed. With that for a starter, these young men experimented upon dogs in search for the truth as to the cause and cure of diabetes. Their unremitting toil led to the discovery of insulin. A year later, Dr. Banting and Dr. John James R. McLeod, then professor of physiology at the university, received the joint award of the Nobel prize in medicine in 1923. It is said that McLeod did not deserve any part of this prize money as he had only given these impulsive young research workers such a hot, stuffy little basement room in which to work that they often carried on their experiments without clothing and drenched with perspiration. Banting immediately divided his part of the prize money with his co-worker Best, who so richly deserved it. In recognition of the services the Canadian Parliament voted him an annuity of $7,500. In 1923-24 a Banting Research Foundation was established to continue his work. He was knighted in 1934. This noble man lost his life in a tragic flight amid the snows of the Far North, but his great work still goes on. You who have diabetes, and those yet to have it, just remember that it was a self-sacrificing young doctor who toiled in poverty and discomfort to find the way to give you life. Banting, like all true physicians, did not seek personal aggrandizement from his discovery. He gave it generously so all men alike might benefit freely from the discovery. Thus thousands of lives have been saved, that would otherwise have been sacrificed.

Expand Scotia Iron Ore Mines

New Company Expects to Double Present Output of 300,000 Tons a Year

Increasing demands for iron ore in war production has caused the newly formed Scotia Mining Company to expand its projected operations in Centre county. President M. E. Wallace, of Sunbury, disclosed plans to double the 300,000-ton yearly output scheduled by the concern. Necessary expansion, he said, will call for an outlay of at least $140,000. While the production already is under way, Wallace expressed belief it would not possibly meet enlarged needs of war industries before August 1 he added, however, that operations were progressing rapidly.

An extensive tract between State College and Port Matilda has been leased by the company for development. It is the same section from which steel magnate Andrew Carnegie first mined iron ore for his huge operations the latter part of the '80s century.

Five mines are located on the tract Wallace said, two already had been cleaned but with first tests showing more than 50 per cent iron content in ore.

Several lakes provide a water supply for the development. Shipments already are being made to the Riddlesburg Coal and Iron Company for crushing, washing and jigging. Some ore also is going to Johnstown, Steelton and the east Pittsburgh district.

Demand of war-booming industry for more supplies of iron ore within the last few months has attracted new attention to the central Pennsylvania region, once the center of the American steel industry.

Treasury Disapproves Bonds as Prizes

Use of Defense Savings Bonds or Stamps as prizes or rewards in contests or games where an element of personal profit is involved either directly or indirectly is frowned upon by the U. S. Treasury Department, it was officially announced yesterday.

The Department disapproved the use of bonds or stamps as prizes or rewards through lotteries, punch boards, pin ball games or other games of chance. Objection is not made to such use in contests of knowledge or skill, not depending on chance, such as quizzes, or slogan contests not directly connected with the retail sale of merchandise.

Strong disapproval is indicated of the use of bonds or stamps as premiums, discounts, or gifts in connection with the retail sale of merchandise, or "trading stamps," or in any other way calculated to give one merchant or dealer any advantage over his competitors.

The objections are based on consideration of public policy, and do not depend upon the legality or illegality of the devices or games mentioned, or upon whether they are violations of fair trade practices, the official announcement concludes.
